

The Literary Digest

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN
NOV 15 1907

PUBLIC OPINION (New York) combined with THE LITERARY DIGEST

(Title Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

CONTENTS

TOPICS OF THE DAY:

PAGE

Larger Aspects of the November Elections . . .	735
Prohibition Growing Formidable . . .	737
What is the Matter with American Cities? . . .	739
The Depleted Army . . .	740
Chancellor Day's Attack on the President . . .	741
The Poles in America . . .	742

FOREIGN COMMENT

English Views of the Panic and the President . . .	743
Treat Ireland Like the Transvaal . . .	744
Would Socialism Prevent War? . . .	744
The Danger of Austro-Hungarian Disruption Averted.	745
Republican France the Hope of Europe . . .	746

SCIENCE AND INVENTION:

How to Get Rid of Tattoo-marks . . .	747
Greek Temples and Pile-dwellings . . .	747
A New "Roller"-skate . . .	748
Transatlantic Wireless . . .	749
More Many-horned Sheep . . .	750
Problem of Pure Milk . . .	750
How the World is Growing Smaller . . .	751
The Pullman-porter Nuisance . . .	751

THE RELIGIOUS WORLD:

Orientalizing Christianity . . .	752
On Jumping Parochial Fences . . .	752
General Booth . . .	753
Who Will Get the Cardinals? . . .	753
The Church's Part in the "Ethical Revival" . . .	754
Sunday Amusements in New York . . .	754

LETTERS AND ART:

Paderewski and the Youngsters . . .	755
"Submerged Renown" . . .	756
Joy of an Editor . . .	756
Jeopardy of the New York Stage . . .	757
The Thorny Path of Realism . . .	756

GUIDE TO THE NEW BOOKS 759-760

MISCELLANEOUS 761-770

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY, Publishers
New York and London

Travel and Resort Directory

A Pasadena Home

California

Away from constantly-besetting cares and conventionalities; away from the chill of Fall and Winter, and find rest and recreation in that paradise of flowers, beautiful scenery and rare climate—California. Take The

Overland Limited

on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry.

By far the most luxurious and exclusive of transcontinental trains. Perfect in every appointment; unapproached service in dining, sleeping and library-observation cars. Electric lighted throughout.

Leaves Union Passenger Station, Chicago, 6.05 p. m., completing trip in less than three days. Also a train 10.10 p. m. with through standard and tourist sleepers.

Literature upon addressing,
F. A. MILLER, General Passenger Agent, CHICAGO.
W. S. HOWELL, General Eastern Agent, 331 Broadway, NEW YORK.

ORIENT

CLARK'S TENTH ANNUAL CRUISE

Feb 6, '08. 70 days, by chartered S. S. "Arabic," 16,000 tons. Tours Round the World, to Europe, Sicily, etc.

FRANK C. CLARK, - Times Building, New York

ORIENT Select party sails Jan. 25. Also Seven Tours to Europe, spring summer. De Potter Tours, 32 B'way, N. Y. (29th year.)

The University Prints

Art of The Netherlands and Germany A new series of 500 just completed. 1500 subjects on Greek and Roman Sculpture (von Mach), and Italian Art previously published. Size 5 1/4 x 8 inches. One Cent Each. Send a two-cent stamp for catalogue. BUREAU OF UNIVERSITY TRAVEL 19 Trinity Place Boston, Mass.

ALTHOUSE'S FOREIGN TOURS

To all parts of Europe and the Orient. Under our expert guidance you derive all the pleasures and benefits possible and avoid all the discomforts and vexations of travel.

Nile-Oriental Tour

sailing January 25 and February 18. Exclusive features. Party limited to 15 members. Descriptive Booklet on request. 716 Chestnut Street, PHILADELPHIA.

Around Porto Rico

The special tours of the New York and Porto Rico Steamship Co. occupy three weeks and are ideal yachting excursions on summer seas. The steamers, which are absolutely safe, have every convenience, with only outside staterooms. They circle the entire island and stop at many interesting and historic localities. The ship is the tourist's hotel during the entire trip, so the labor and inconvenience of land travel is avoided. The special tourist rate for this cruise is $140, which includes every expense.

Write for Illustrated Booklet

NEW YORK & PORTO RICO STEAMSHIP COMPANY
12 Broadway, New York
Or RAYMOND & WHITCOMB CO., all Principal Cities.

COMFORTABLE ORIENTAL TRAVEL

Congregational House, BOSTON.

Choice of routes—leisure—expert management—everything first-class. Write for attractive booklet NOW. H. W. DUNNING & CO., 103

PILGRIMAGE to HOLY LAND, ROME, and tour of EUROPE, leaving Jan. 16, '08. For particulars, address McGRANE'S TOURS, 187 B'way, N. Y. City.

TO EUROPE The IDEAL Way

Write now. J. PAUL GRAHAM, A. M., Principal Lawrence School, Box 1065 Pittsburg

IDEAL TOURS $165 UP

FREE TOUR TO EUROPE or Holy Land. Organizers of a party of eight will be given a free ticket. Edwin Jones, 462 Putnam Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Wit of Women

BY KATE SANBORN

Miss Sanborn has come forward with a wealth of genuine humor and mirth—epigrams, quips repartee, stories, and sketches, from the writings of women, to refute the oft-repeated allegation that women do not possess a real sense of humor.

No woman should miss this delightful book.

12mo, cloth, 215 pages price, $1.50

Funk & Wagnalls Company New York and London

"PULPIT TREES and Homiletic Undergrowth"

By THOMAS KELLY, D.D. A most suggestive book for preachers. Texts selected and handled effectively in an original and striking manner. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Funk & Wagnalls Company New York

PINEHURST

NORTH CAROLINA

(Founded by JAMES W. TUFTS)

THE LEADING HEALTH RESORT OF THE SOUTH

Finest Livery of Saddle Horses to be Found Anywhere

THREE GOLF COURSES kept in first-class condition—35,000-acre shooting preserve with trained dogs and guides

TENNIS COURTS and COUNTRY CLUB

FOUR SPLENDID HOTELS

FIFTY-TWO COTTAGES

A Preparatory School under good direction

CONSUMPTIVES EXCLUDED

OPENING OF HOTELS:

Holly Inn opens Nov. 20th

Carolina opens Jan. 11th

Harvard opens Jan. 15th

Berkshire opens Jan. 15th

Through Pullman service via Seaboard Air Line or Southern Railway. Only one night from New York, Boston and Cincinnati. Don't fail to send to nearest railroad offices for literature, illustrating the out-of-door features of PINEHURST and giving full details of its attractions, or address

Pinehurst General Office

PINEHURST, North Carolina

OR

LEONARD TUFTS, Owner Boston, Mass.

GATES TOURS

MEXICO and CALIFORNIA TOURS 16th Annual Mexico Tours by private trains or steamer January, February and March. $165 up including all expenses. California Tour $50. Send for itineraries.

GATES TOURS, TOLEDO, OHIO or 200 Washington Street, Boston

COLLYER THE TOURS

(AWAY-FROM-THE-USUAL)

For JAPAN, SOUTH AMERICA, and ROUND THE WORLD 372 Boylston Street BOSTON

ORIENT! A Select Limited Party under experienced leader ship, will leave New York January 4th, 1908, for Egypt and the Nile, Smyrna, Constantinople, Greece, Sicily, Naples and Rome during Holy Week and Easter. Everything first class. Moderate cost. References exchanged. Twelfth Annual tour. For full particulars, address Mr. CHARLES F. PECK, 489 West 152d St., N. Y.

UNIQUE THINGS IN TRAVEL

American scholarship and common sense applied to the problem of European Travel. Write for our announcement. BUREAU OF UNIVERSITY TRAVEL 19 Trinity Place, Boston

EUROPE Summer Tour, $250

12 tours at lowest rates from $165 up. British Isles, Belgium, Holland, France, Switzerland, Germany, Austria, Turkey, Greece and Italy. For details apply NOW. THE TEMPLE TOURS, P. O. Box 2178 Boston, Mass.

$250 FOR 60-DAY SELECT SUMMER TRIP TO EUROPE.

S. H. LONGLEY, 214 Main St., Worcester, Mass.

HAMBURG-AMERICAN LINE

Are You Going Away ?

TWO WEEKS TRIPS OF THREE WEEKS FOUR WEEKS

Or of Longer Duration, to Summer Lands

We dispatch superb passenger ships to the West Indies

Venezuela
Costa Rica
Panama Canal

the MEDITERRANEAN, the Adriatic,

the Orient

Egypt, the Holy Land,
etc.

Send for our illustrated book of travel
"Winter Voyages."

HAMBURG-AMERICAN LINE

35-37 Broadway, New York.

Boston

Chicago

San Francisco

Philadelphia

St. Louis

BOOKS

BOOKS

BOOKS

MOST EXTRAORDINARY HOLIDAY OFFER

This new Illustrated Chapman and Hall Oxford University Edition of the Complete Works of Charles Dickens

PUBLISHED AT $40. HOLIDAY PRICE, Complete, $22.50
20 Volumes, bound in handsome flexible leather

THO in the past we have made exceptional book offers, we believe this to be the greatest Holiday book proposition we have ever put before the public. No other author's works are so absolutely essential to a library as those of Charles Dickens.

That we are in a position to offer this 20-volume Oxford University Edition of Dickens at $22.50, comes about through arrangements with the publishers, giving us special privileges, and practically exclusive rights to the entire edition for the holiday trade.

DESCRIPTION.—These beautiful volumes were printed at the Oxford University Press on opaque paper. The sets are bound in full limp leather with gilt top and gold back stamp.

By a special arrangement between Chapman & Hall, the owners of the copyright, and Henry Frowde, Esq., Oxford University Press, a new set of plates has been made, which, in the clearness and large size of type, make the page a delight to the eye.

THE BOOKS CONTAIN UPWARDS OF 700 ILLUSTRATIONS BY THE MASTER ILLUSTRATORS OF DICKENS; from the originals by Seymour, "Phiz," George Cruikshank, F. Walker, Sir Edwin Landseer, D. Maclise, John Leech, Marcus Stone, George Cattermole, S. Luke Fildes, R. G. Stanfield, J. Tenniel, and others. 15,428 Pages.

This edition also includes new portraits of Dickens and all the additional stories and sketches which appear in the Gadshill and Authentic editions. At the beginning of each book is printed, for convenient reference, a list of characters mentioned in the text.

Mail your order immediately to be sure to be one of the first fifty taking advantage of the special free offer mentioned on the left. We will hold sets for future delivery if desired, and ship to any address you give.

SIMPSON-CRAWFORD CO.

Sixth Avenue, 19th and 20th Sts.,

New York City

Free

To the first fifty purchasers we will give absolutely free a

PHOTOGRAPHURE DRAWING of characters from Dickens by Frederick Barnard, the celebrated English artist.

WORTH EASILY $5.00 EACH

As these pictures were taken from a de luxe portfolio published in London by subscription at five guineas, now out of print entirely, you can readily see how extraordinary in this additional offer.

The Simpson-
Crawford
Company
8th Ave.,
19th St., New York
Gentlemen: Please find enclosed $22.50 for which send me, express prepaid, one set, boxed, of the Complete Works of Charles Dickens, and, free of charge, the photographure drawing by Frederick Barnard.

Name.....
Address.....

Our readers are asked to mention THE LITERARY DIGEST when writing to advertisers.

JUST A FEW SETS

NOW OFFERED IN OUR SPECIAL
CLEARANCE SALE

DIGEST readers at little more than one-third the price of the English edition, and at almost fifty per cent. less than the price of the regular American edition. The regular price is $17.50. We offer these few sets at the special clearance price of $10.00 each, carriage prepaid. LITERARY DIGEST readers may pay for them on the monthly plan, $1.00 within five days if the work is satisfactory, and the balance $2.00 per month. Our readers will, therefore, have nearly half a year in which to pay for the work, but they will receive the set of seven volumes at once, and have the privilege of using it while paying for it. This work is a preachers' and people's treasure-house of information and inspiration. It is invaluable to all preachers, Bible students, Sunday-school teachers, Christian families, and in fact to all who wish to give the Psalms intelligent reading and accurate interpretation. "The Treasury of David" is Spurgeon's great life-work. Here is an unusual opportunity for placing it on your library shelves on the easiest possible terms. Do not miss it. Accept at once. We guarantee satisfaction. Send the coupon below, and we will promptly send you the complete work. No money is required until it has met with your satisfaction.

We have in stock a few sets of this monumental work. These sets must be immediately disposed of in order to make room for our new publications. They are offered to LITERARY

NEARLY 50% OFF

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
NO MONEY REQUIRED NOW

 To Date We Have Sold 52,500 Volumes of this Great Work in the United States

"I have used Mr. Spurgeon's 'Treasury of David' for three years, and found it worthy of its name. Whoso goeth in there will find rich spoils."—Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D., Brooklyn.

SPURGEON'S GREAT LIFE-WORK THE TREASURY OF DAVID

Seven Octavo Volumes, Cloth Bound—Over Three Thousand Two Hundred Pages
Quotations from Hundreds of Writers—The Result of Twenty-eight Years of Research

Grand and inspiring as the Psalms are to the ordinary reader, there is much significance in them for which one is required to go below the surface. There is a marked paucity of material on a large number of the Psalms in other reference works. The information usually follows certain ruts. The object of this great work is to bring within easy access a profusion of entirely new and original information and light on all the Psalms, without partiality to any single one or group. The result is a vast quantity of illustrative material, unapproached by any other work in existence.

Six Great Subjects of Treatment on the Book of Psalms

- | | |
|--|--|
| I. An Original Exposition of the Book of Psalms.
II. A Collection of Illustrated Extracts from the whole Range of Literature.
III. A Series of Homiletic Hints upon Almost Every Verse. | IV. A List of Writers upon Each Psalm.
V. An Index to Each Volume, giving Page References of Authors Quoted or Referred to.
VI. A General Topical Index to the Entire Work, Chiefly for Pastoral Use and Aid. |
|--|--|

More Felicitous Illustrations, More Valuable Sermonic Hints, Than in All Other Books Combined

"Spurgeon's 'Treasury of David' contains more felicitous illustrations, more valuable sermonic hints, than can be found in all other works on the same book put together."—The Christian Herald, New York.

REQUIREMENTS OF STUDENTS, LAYMEN AND PREACHERS FULLY MET.—Its illustrations aim to meet every requirement of the Bible or theological student and to supply homiletical suggestions and illustrations which shall offer the best assistance to the preacher. To laymen in reading the Psalms this work will disclose new beauties and meanings. It will be of great value when used in connection with home devotional readings.

EVERY HELP TO MAKE THE TEXT AVAILABLE.—THE TREASURY OF DAVID aims to offer every conceivable help which could tend to elucidate the text of the Psalms and make them richly available for practical instruction. Many new side-lights are thrown on familiar Psalms.

EVERY PAGE ABOUNDS IN RICH HOMILETIC HINTS

"It is surpassed by no other work we have seen on the Psalms."—Louisville Christian Observer.

"It will prove a standard work on the Psalms for all time . . . invaluable to all preachers and indispensable to every minister's library."—William Ormiston, D.D., New York.

"It is a life-work of the Prince of Preachers. No minister of the Church of Christ for 1800 years has drawn and held such a number of hearers so long. If the secret of his power is here revealed, it will be a Treasury priceless in value for centuries to come."—W. H. Vandoner, D.D.

A WHOLE LIBRARY OF ILLUSTRATIVE LITERATURE.—It furnishes a whole library in itself, giving the results of Mr. Spurgeon's scholarly research, the ablest side-lights on the Psalms, and the most aggressive sermonic hints on the Psalter to be found in literature. It antiques and supercedes preceding commentaries and works of an expository and homiletical character. It is a necessity to every preacher.

"These rich and ripe and regal octavos will present the finest front in your library, and afford the noblest culture for your mind and heart."—Rocky Mountain Baptist, Denver.

"It is far more than a commentary; it is what its name implies, a treasury of the Psalms—a treasure-house rich beyond description."—Mail, Halifax.

OF IMMENSE VALUE TO PREACHERS AND LAYMEN

"The work will prove of immense value not only to the preacher and pastor, but to every Christian in his reading of the Psalter."—The Evangelical Churchman.

"To preachers the homiletic hints which abound on every page will afford a rich treasury indeed."—The New York Observer.

"The price is extremely moderate for so large and important a work. We have examined it with care and we are greatly pleased with the plan and execution."—Western Christian Advocate, Cincinnati.

A FEW SETS at ALMOST HALF PRICE to THOSE WHO ACT PROMPTLY

To hundreds of LITERARY DIGEST readers who have heretofore not been able to afford it, this splendid work will now be easily available, being offered at such a sweeping reduction and on such easy terms.

SWEEPING REDUCTION!

It was published simultaneously with and contains the exact matter of the English Edition, which has sold at $4.00 per volume in this country—$28.00 for the complete work. Our edition is in every way preferable, and by this great offer it is made easily available to everybody at the tremendous reduction of little more than one-third the regular price of the English Edition. Can you afford to miss this opportunity?

FUNK AND WAGNALLS COMPANY

SPECIAL CLEARANCE SALE COUPON

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY
44-60 EAST 23D ST., NEW YORK CITY

Gentlemen—I accept your special offer of Spurgeon's "Treasury of David" to LITERARY DIGEST readers for $10. carriage prepaid (regular price $17.50). I agree to send you $1 within five days of receipt of the work, as the first payment for the same. I agree to remit the balance of the price in monthly instalments of $2 each until settled in full. It is understood that if I consider the work unsatisfactory I may return it to you within five days of receipt.

L. D. 11-16-07, Name
Date..... Address.....

EASY TERMS!

The regular cash price of our American Edition has been heretofore $2.50 per volume, $17.50 per set. We now offer the complete work to our patrons at the low price of only $10. carriage prepaid. Payments may be made on easy instalments of $1.00 within five days of receipt and $2.00 a month thereafter until paid for. We guarantee satisfaction. If the books are not satisfactory to you, they may be returned in five days.

Publishers, 44-60 E. 23d St., N. Y.

The Booklovers Library Service

SAVES you the buying of Books you would not care to own, but wish to read.
GIVES you an early choice of
THE NEWEST BOOKS
For—TWO CENTS—a Day

If this service is not in your town, find out WHY by writing us for particulars. It can be extended to every Town and City in the U. S. and Canada. Write for our catalogue.

THE BOOKLOVERS LIBRARY
 5 East 23d Street, New York
 1611 Chestnut St., Philadelphia. 6 Park St., Boston.

20,000 BOOKS on all subjects. Also Plays and Speakers at Wholesale prices. Catalog free.
 St. Paul Book & Stationery Co., 26 Sixth St., St. Paul, Minn.

"AN INTRODUCTION TO UNITARIANISM"
 by Dr. Samuel M. Crothers, and other Unitarian sermons SENT FREE on application to P. O. M. Committee, 2 Berkeley Place, Cambridge, Mass.

Just Published

RACE LIFE OF THE ARYAN PEOPLES

By JOSEPH P. WIDNEY

A Profoundly Interesting Biography

"Starting with the Aryan man in his proto-Aryan home, the author has walked with him and his sons as they emigrated into India, Persia, Southern and Western Europe, and at last into America, to stand upon its Western shores and look off into the future."
 —Newark (N. J.) News.

"The life of each branch of the Aryan race is concentrated, as it were, into one man with a profoundly interesting genealogy."—Newark (N. J.) News.

Why Am I Here? and Whither am I Going?

"It is an effort on a large scale to establish something toward a solution of the great riddle of the universe: What is man? why is he here? whither is he going?"—New York Sun.

A Story That Grips You Hard

"A subject tremendous enough to stagger the average author. The story grips you hard—solid, cold facts sounding like romance replete with fascination."
 —Philadelphia Ledger.

Opens the Foundations of Destiny

"He takes you still farther—into the very councils of Heaven itself, and reads from St. Peter's 'Book of Life' the life of a race as recorded there for eternity—he goes to the very foundations of destiny."
 —Baltimore Sun.

Two Volumes, 12mo Cloth. $4.00, net
 Funk & Wagnalls Company, 44-60 East 23d Street, NEW YORK

Does Your Church Sunday-school Society Club Charity Want Money?

Send for a specially arranged PLAN by means of which a substantial sum of money can be raised in three months

Address Office D, THE CIRCLE

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY
 44-60 East 23d St. New York City

"THE INFLUENCE OF THE MIND ON THE BODY" A most interesting little volume on a widely discussed topic, by the famous Dr. Paul Du Bois of the University of Berne. 50 cts. net; by mail 54 cts. Funk & Wagnalls Company, 44-60 East 23d Street, New York City.

DON'T LOSE THIS OPPORTUNITY

Copyright, de Brunff, 1904

We offer One Thousand Sets Only, at an Extraordinary Low Introductory Price.

A Real Bargain

120 BIBLE PICTURES

By J. JAMES TISSOT

Reproduced in all Their Gorgeous Colors

SEND $1.00 TODAY

And we will send by return mail a handsome portfolio (size 5x6) containing 120 pictures in full colors.

To make the men and women of the Bible actual, living characters to their pupils is one of the first duties of Sunday-school teachers, and no better help can they find for this than in the Tissot pictures.

The whole world acknowledges that J. James Tissot was the greatest artist that ever lived, so far as Biblical subjects are concerned.

Nothing approaching this work has ever been attempted before. In a series of splendid pictures, the great and impressive scenes in the Bible story are depicted, true in color, costume, landscape, and all details to the life, the country, and the time.

Only the unparalleled success in the higher priced editions makes possible this phenomenally low offer now.

These pictures have received the unqualified endorsement of the leading clergymen and Sunday-school teachers throughout the United States.

Nothing could be more helpful and interesting and delightful, when one is reading the Bible, than such a graphic interpretation of sacred stories.

In no other way can the Bible stories be made so real and actual to children. No better gift to a child or Sunday-school teacher.

Money refunded if not satisfactory

AMERICAN TISSOT SOCIETY 27 East 22nd Street NEW YORK

The Springfield Republican: It is a clear and well-ordered compendium of what has been heretofore scattered and voluminous literature on the subject of communistic experiments in America. . . . It is a serious and important work.

History of Socialism in the United States

A complete account of the origin, development, and present status of socialistic movements throughout the United States, indispensable to an intelligent appreciation of socialism as it exists in this country. By MORRIS HILLQUIT.

Cincinnati Commercial Tribune: Every position taken has behind it the authority of facts and figures.

The Philadelphia Item: It is a work of extensive scope and sociological as well as historical value.

The Watchman, Boston: It is exceedingly timely and valuable.

The Washington Evening Star: An intelligent and well-written record of a popular movement.

12mo, Cloth, 371 Pages. $1.50 Net; by Mail, $1.67

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY, Pubs., New York

YOU CAN SEE EUROPE Without Expense in 1908

Write us at once and plan for it NOW

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY

44 East 23d Street,

NEW YORK

JONATHAN, A TRAGEDY
 A charming volume of verse by Thos. Ewing, Jr. By mail, $1.07. Funk & Wagnalls Company, Pubs., New York

BALZAC

A highly interesting and fascinating study by Adolph Hyppolite Taine, translated, with an appreciation of Taine by Lorenzo O'Rourke.

12mo, cloth, frontispiece. $1.00 net; by mail, $1.10
FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY
 NEW YORK and LONDON

The Manufacturer's Reputation Is The Purchaser's Safeguard

DURING the past year we have been endeavoring to educate our subscribers against the injustice and the harm of purchasing substitutes or imitations. In our talks on this subject, we have tried to instil these points: That the dealer who substitutes is unscrupulous. That such a dealer realizes a larger profit on the imitation at the expense of the customer. That the purchaser who accepts a counterfeit robs the manufacturer of the genuine of his just due. That this purchaser invariably is served with inferior quality. We are pleased to say that our talks have met with much encouragement.

Manufacturers spend thousands of dollars in building up reputations of national importance. We believe that they deserve your support and your protection from the many imitators and substitutors who are seeking to trade upon their well-deserved success. The trade-mark is the customer's protection, and it is a business axiom that no manufacturer of a cheap, poorly made article can successfully advertise that article. It is not to-day's sale, but tomorrow's, next week's, next year's, that the honest manufacturer seeks. There is a profit only in your continuous patronage and your confidence in the merit of his product.

The purchasing power represented by Literary Digest readers, as a body, is unsurpassed in any world community of similar numbers. 160,000 families, 800,000 readers, will see the announcements of the quality and merit articles printed below.

Your Druggist can supply them. If they are not immediately in stock, it will be to your advantage to insist that your dealer get them, or apply to the manufacturers direct.

AUTO STROP SAFETY RAZOR

Auto Strop Razor Co.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES

John I. Brown & Son

MURRAY'S CHARCOAL TABLETS

A. J. Ditman

DENTACURA TOOTH PASTE

Dentacura Company

NEW SKIN, the Liquid Court Plaster

Douglas Mfg. Company

STERLING BAY RUM

Esterlinas & Company

EVANS' THROAT PASTILLES

Evans Sons, Lescher & Webb

The PROPHYLACTIC TOOTH BRUSH

Florence Mfg. Co.

GEM JR. SAFETY RAZOR

Gem Cutlery Company

COCA-COLA

The Coca-Cola Company

POMPEIAN MASSAGE CREAM

Pompeian Mfg. Company

CONKLIN'S SELF-FILLING FOUNTAIN PEN

The Conklin Pen Co.

VINOL

Chester Kent & Co.

RAZAC

Hapgoods Sales Co.

DIOXOGEN

Oakland Chemical Company

JOHNSON'S PREPARED FLOOR WAX

S. C. Johnson & Son

ZODENTA and MILKWEED CREAM

F. F. Ingram & Company

CALOX, the Oxygen Tooth Powder

McKesson & Robbins

ED. PINAUD'S HAIR TONIC
ED. PINAUD'S LILAC VEGETAL

Parfumerie Ed. Pinaud

IVORY SOAP

Proctor & Gamble

WILLIAMS' TOILET ARTICLES

J. B. Williams Company

RUBBERSET SHAVING BRUSH

Rubberset Brush Co.

HAND SAPOLIO

Enoch Morgan's Sons Co.

CARBO MAGNETIC RAZOR

A. L. Silberstein

The SAFE CLINICAL THERMOMETER

Taylor Bros. & Co.

TRO TRO CHOCOLATE KRUNCH

Trowbridge Chocolate Chip Co.

GILLETTE SAFETY RAZOR

Gillette Sales Company

WHITING PAPERS

Whiting Paper Company

RAT BIS-KIT

Rat Biscuit Company

RED DWARF INK PENCIL

D. Wood & Company

WELCH'S GRAPE JUICE

Welch Grape Juice Company

THE LITERARY DIGEST

Advertising Department

THE LITERARY DIGEST

PUBLIC OPINION (New York) combined with THE LITERARY DIGEST

Published by Funk & Wagnalls Company (Isaac K. Funk, Pres., Adam W. Wagnalls, Vice-Pres. and Treas., Robert Scott, Sec'y), 44-60 E. 23d St., New York

VOL. XXXV., No. 20

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 16, 1907

WHOLE NUMBER, 917

TOPICS OF THE DAY

LARGER ASPECTS OF THE NOVEMBER ELECTIONS

THE Republican press is manifestly relieved to find in the results of the November elections no indication of a political revulsion growing out of the recent financial panic. In most cases, as the Philadelphia Press (Rep.) remarks, a panic or even an approach to a panic means a loss of popularity and prestige for the party in power. Altho the issues involved in these elections were in the main essentially local, the seekers of political portents find in the results much that seems to them of national significance. Thus the President himself, in a statement given out from the White House, describes the results as "extremely gratifying," and the New York World (Dem.) reads the signs searchingly, but in vain, for any hint of a "Roosevelt reaction." "It is easy to see," affirms the St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.), after surveying the returns as a whole, "that the long period of Republican supremacy is likely to be lengthened out to the extent of at least four years more"; and the New York Tribune (Rep.) asserts confidently that "the Democratic party as a national party is weaker now than it was in 1904 or 1906; and nothing in Tuesday's voting indicates that it is gaining ground East, West, or South at the expense of Republicanism." In fact, the New York Sun (Ind.) discovers the Democratic party "in the historic act of turning its weapons upon itself and committing hara-kiri." The process is thus described:

"In Massachusetts the Democratic factions were tearing each other tooth and nail before election day came, and on the eve of a Presidential contest the party finds its ranks broken and scattered and the ground heaped with dead and wounded; but the casualties have been inflicted by Democrats. . . .

"In Nebraska the only Democrat conspicuous enough to be accounted a leader repeated his biennial failure after writing the party platform, organizing victory, and making a personal campaign. This eminent man lost his own ward and rolled up a large majority in the State against his party. . . . In Kentucky, where he went to inspire the Democratic host and point the way to victory, there was an utter rout and the Republicans triumphed magnificently."

Returning to the statement from the White House, we read in part:

"As compared with the elections next preceding the last Presidential elections, we have done decidedly better than we did in 1903. Then, as yesterday, Rhode Island and Maryland went against us, but this year we have won a sweeping victory in Kentucky for the first time since McKinley's first election; and the victory in Massachusetts was also remarkable.

"The showing in Pennsylvania and Nebraska is equally good. Moreover, the showing in New York State as a whole was excellent, far better than was the case prior to the last Presidential election.

"That the result in Manhattan was due to purely local causes is shown by comparing it with the decisive triumphs in Brooklyn, Buffalo, Albany, and in the State generally. . . .

"As a whole the showing has been an improvement over what it was four years ago and eight years ago."

The President's exultant tone, The World mournfully admits, is justified by the facts. Says that sturdy Democratic paper:

"Comparatively, the Republican party polls its heaviest vote in Presidential years, the Democratic party in off years. This was an off year. There should have been decisive Democratic victories with corresponding Republican defeats. Where are they?

"Not in New Jersey, altho in the early hours of Wednesday morning The World deluded itself into such a belief. . . . The bitterest anti-Roosevelt sentiment in the country now exists in New York south of Chambers Street. Nowhere is this sentiment better reflected politically than in the great commuter vote of New Jersey. Taking this fact into consideration, the saving of that State to the Republicans was a remarkable achievement.

"Kentucky has gone Republican for the fourth time since 1894, and Willson's plurality for Governor is greater than the combined Republican pluralities in the three other elections. Nebraska, Mr. Bryan's own State, has given increased off-year majorities to the Republican candidates. The Republican candidate for Governor in Massachusetts polled more votes than all his opponents combined. Despite a fusion defeat in Manhattan the Republicans carried Brooklyn and held their own in the State. Indeed, they have done more, for if the Independence League is to be a permanent factor the Democratic party may be as sadly split in New York as it is in Massachusetts.

"The truth is that the results throughout the country evidence no diminution of Republican strength and no abatement of Mr. Roosevelt's popularity. . . .

"Mr. Roosevelt has a right to exult, but is the country warranted in sharing his jubilation?"

While the Boston Transcript (Ind. Rep.) claims that "the Republican success in Kentucky is a clear national gain for the Republicans," the Springfield Republican (Ind.) asserts with equal positiveness that "to those who have knowledge of local conditions such a result can be invested with no national significance in connection with the Presidential struggle a year hence."

The result in New York County is interesting as a comment upon the much-discussed Republican-Hearst fusion. "Each party to the fusion," asserts the Philadelphia Press (Rep.), "lost from 40,000 to 50,000 votes, and the vote of both together was far below what each had been able to poll separately." Mr. Hearst, however, remarks in his New York American that "the defeat of the anti-Tammany ticket demonstrates only that party ties are stronger than civic sentiment at present in New York." The Tribune, the principal Republican paper of the State, thinks that Tammany will never again fear Mr. Hearst, while "the Republicans will henceforth

TERMS: $3 a year, in advance; four months, $1; single copy, 10 cents; postage to Canada 85 cents a year, other foreign postage $1.50 a year. RECEIPT of payment is shown in about two weeks by date on address label; subscription including the month named. Instructions for RENEWAL, DISCONTINUANCE, or CHANGE OF ADDRESS should be sent two weeks before the date they are to go into effect. Both old and new addresses must always be given. DISCONTINUANCE: We find that many of our subscribers prefer not to have their subscriptions interrupted and their files broken in case they fail to remit before expiration. Nevertheless, it is not assumed that continuous service is desired, but subscribers are expected to notify us with reasonable promptness to stop if the paper is no longer required. PRESENTATION COPIES: Many persons subscribe for friends, intending that the paper shall stop at the end of the year. If instructions are given to this effect, they will receive attention at the proper time.

Published weekly by Funk & Wagnalls Company, 44-60 East Twenty-third street, New York, and Salisbury Square, London, E. C.

Entered at the New York Post-office as Second-class Matter.

have more cause to dread his support than his opposition." No less important than the State elections, says the Springfield Republican (Ind.), were a number of the municipal elections. We read further:

"Of supreme consequence, of course, was the reform victory in San Francisco. . . . Mayor Taylor's plurality shows that ordinary party lines were swept away by the voters, and that union labor, as a political force, could not hold the wage-earners in a solid phalanx against the cause that Dr. Taylor so plainly represented. . . .

"Coming across the Continent one must pause at Salt Lake City and then at Louisville. In the Mormon capital the victory for the so-called American party, which opposed both the Republican and Democratic organizations on the ground that church influences controlled them, will be popular elsewhere in the country owing to the disfavor in which the Mormon hierarchy's activity in politics is generally viewed. . . .

"The Republican mayoralty victory in Louisville will be an immense gain for decency in the government of the Kentucky city, where judicial intervention was necessary last spring in order to unseat a Democratic mayor who had obtained office by fraud. There was a heavy Democratic vote on Tuesday for the Republican candidate; and this revolt against the party machine, it should be noted, had a marked effect in turning the State also over to the Republicans.

"Mayor Johnson's notable triumph in Cleveland was certainly one to be thankful for.

President Roosevelt's outrageous intervention in the affairs of the city need not be dwelt upon nor is it necessary to do more than recall Secretary Taft's extraordinary remarks about the desirability of a 'party' victory in Cleveland for the sake of the party in the State. Both the President and the Secretary blundered irretrievably in thus identifying Mr. Burton's candidacy with their own political ambitions, and whether or not their action has affected the result, it is fortunate for the cause of non-partizanship in municipal affairs that this great Western city, on national issues Republican by heavy pluralities, should have passed by their appeals unheeded. . . .

"The remarkable victory in Toledo, also, for Mayor Whitlock, who declined a regular party nomination in order to run as an Independent, reveals a public sentiment in that city no less pronounced than that in Cleveland in favor of the Johnson idea of dealing with the public-monopoly services. Toledo, which began by electing the late 'Golden Rule' Jones as its free-lance mayor, now has a notable record for independence of party in municipal affairs. Mr. Whitlock is already one of the strong mayors of the country.

"In Jersey City an excellent mayor, Mr. Fagan, after a memorable administration on reform lines, was defeated for reelection; and this forms one of the regrettable features of Tuesday's voting."

In addition to the new governors whose portraits we publish, Governor Guild (Rep.) was reelected in Massachusetts and Governor Higgins (Dem.) in Rhode Island.

STICK TOGETHER
And play "crack the whip" with him.
—Bradley in the Chicago Daily News.

From Puck. Copyrighted 1907. By permission.

IT MIGHT HELP SOME IF WALL STREET GAVE TRADING-STAMPS.
—Glacken in Puck.

Copyrighted, 1907, by Harper & Brothers, New York.

THE MAN WHO ROCKED THE BOAT.
—Rogers in Harper's Weekly.

HINT AND COMMENT FROM THE CARTOONIST.

AUSTIN L. CROTHERS (DEM.) OF MARYLAND.

AUGUSTUS E. WILLSON (REP.) OF KENTUCKY.

E. F. NOEL (DEM.) OF MISSISSIPPI.

JOHN FRANKLIN FORT (REP.) OF NEW JERSEY.

"The State of Maryland," says the Baltimore Sun, "is so closely divided politically that the party in power is always on its good behavior."

His election attracts special attention because of Kentucky's prominence in the Democratic ranks. Both candidates espoused temperance.

Mr. Noel won his State without a struggle, as no opposition candidate of any party entered the field against him.

Mr. Fort's personality, says the New York Tribune, counted much in the campaign, in which even the local issues were not very clearly defined.

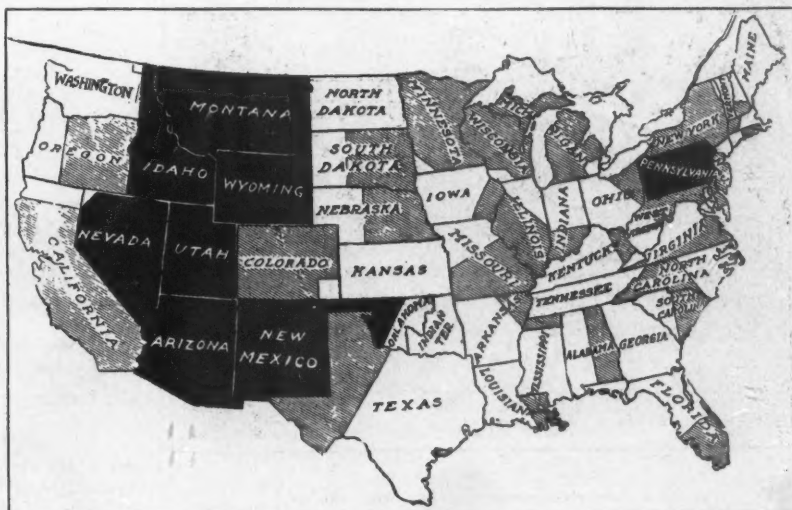

THE NEW GOVERNORS-ELECT.

PROHIBITION GROWING FORMIDABLE

RECENT victories of the prohibition forces are drawing respectful comments even from papers which formerly treated the movement as a joke. In the elections of November 5 two of Delaware's three counties "went dry" after one of the most exciting campaigns in the history of the State, and the day was marked by minor prohibition successes in various other parts of the country also. According to Mr. Charles R. Jones, national chairman of the Prohibition party, the election returns "show a marked climax to the series of Prohibition triumphs of the last ninety days." If these successes, he adds, are not misleading, they mean that "the prohibition issue will force itself into the national politics of 1908 by its own momentum and will there afford the Prohibition party the greatest opportunity of its career." Whether Mr. Jones's reading of the signs be accurate or not, the press—including the leading organs of the liquor trade—agree that antisaloon sentiment was never stronger throughout the country than it is now. Thus The Wine and Spirit Gazette (New York) warns "the trade" that "the license system is in peril and the business interests dependent upon its perpetuity are threatened with disaster;" and it is not long since Chicago's Champion of Fair Play, the official organ of the liquor trade of the West, admonished its patrons that their business was being attacked from all sides, adding: "You will need all your resources, all your grit, all your strength, and all your united power to preserve your rights and privileges against the flood-tide of unreasonable and unreasoning prejudices." There is a remarkable tendency on the part of the liquor press to saddle the retail end of the business with all the blame for the present situation. Thus Beverages (New York) admits that "various forms of viciousness seem to fasten to the liquor traffic with the tenacity of barnacles"; and it adds: "The reform of the saloon and the elimination of the dive and such like efforts may not head off the wave of prohibition now spreading over this republic, but these steps can certainly help some." A saloon, says the same paper, "has no more right to be a 'sporty' headquarters than a grocery store." If the new prohibition movement has done nothing else, it has brought on the disreputable saloon-keeper the wrath of the better element in his profession, says the New York Evening Post, which goes on to quote from a resolution formulated by the Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association of New York urging that "the present laws be changed, to the end that the [retail] business may be ultimately conducted by men of recognized character and standing in the community." But as The Post remarks, "much as the urbane, benevolent, discreet, and respectable tavern-keeper of fiction and the stage might do to regenerate his business and stop the flood of 'sumptuary laws,' we fear it will take more than a set of resolutions to produce him in the body."

Of seventeen counties in Illinois which availed themselves of the

From the Kansas City "Star."

SHOWING SPREAD OF PROHIBITION IN THE UNITED STATES.

The white places on the map show the proportion (but not the location) of dry territory in each State. The black States are those which have not yet adopted local-option laws. North Dakota, Georgia, Kansas, and Maine are prohibition States, as Oklahoma will be when its new constitution goes into effect. The shaded States have local option laws under which any town or county may "go dry" on its own initiative if it wishes.

new local-option law and submitted the question of "saloons or no saloons" to their voters during the November elections, sixteen "went dry." Not many days before, Jefferson County, Ala., including the great industrial town of Birmingham, voted for prohibition, the new order of things to begin on January 1. "The greatest labor city in the South," says the Birmingham Age-Herald, "has decided to try prohibition, and upon the experiment will depend the success of the movement." "The victory in Birmingham," jubilantly exclaims The Associated Prohibition Press (Chicago), "may prove as notable in its effect upon the Prohibition movement as the defeat of Burgoyne at Saratoga proved to the American Revolution." It is claimed, moreover, that the victory was won largely by the labor vote. It is notable that in the struggle in Delaware neither side had any assistance from the press of that State, which carried its neutrality to the extent of refusing to discuss the question editorially. Wilmington dispatches state that party lines were obliterated in the preelection campaign. The wave of prohibition which has risen in the South and Southwest has not yet reached its height, asserts the New York Times. In Delaware, as in the other Southern States which have gone dry in part or in whole, the well-known relation between crime and drink among the negro population formed one of the most potent arguments with the white voters. In this case, however, it is interesting to read that the negroes themselves voted for no license in a proportion of 3 to 2. That the South "is saddling its race questions on the liquor trade" is one of the grievances of the liquor organs. But as the Philadelphia Press concisely remarks:

"A negro population renders wise the exclusion of liquor-selling as far as possible. This powerful argument weighs all over the South, and the vote for prohibition represents exactly the same reasoning which excludes liquor by Federal law from Indian reservations, shuts it out by international agreement from the islands of the Pacific, and excludes it from great areas in Africa peopled by negroes and under the British flag. Where there is an undeveloped race the reasons there for restriction on the liquor traffic become convincing."

It will be remembered that President Roosevelt, addressing the negro population of Mound Bayou, Miss., congratulated them on spasm, but a cold-blooded business proposition." To quote the Philadelphia North American along the same line:

"We doubt if the majority of Southern men are opposed to drink in the abstract. We know the inherited dislike of the people of that section to anything resembling sumptuary legislation. Yet we find every Southern State which has not established prohibition seriously considering its adoption.

HOW THE OTHER SIDE WORKED.

Women canvassing for Prohibition in the Delaware campaign.

"The reason is simple. The South in its marvelous new prosperity faces two imperative needs—better labor and less crime.

"The Southerners strike down the saloon because whisky is the negro's worst enemy and crime's chief stimulant. They submit to laws that affect their own personal habits because they are good business men and have calculated with mathematical exactness that the value to the community of a sober negro is ten times that of a drunken one.

"Growth of temperance in the Middle West is easier to understand. Prohibition always had staunch support there, and the present spread is merely part of the ever-increasing economic demand for sobriety of the employee by every employer in the land, from the smallest shopkeeper to the largest railroad. . . . Every merchant, manufacturer, and corporation is paying high wages. Every one wants his money's worth, and demands, as he has the right to do, that the product of every worker should furnish a profit above his wage. And every one has learned that only the sober workman provides that profit."

Says the Houston (Tex.) Chronicle:

"There is scarcely a benevolent order in which a man in any way connected with the liquor business can secure admission, and every commercial institution, large and small, is against the saloon.

"The moral, social, financial, and religious influences of the age are against it, and the most surprising and forceful influence is the one last developed, the economic and financial. Money and morals combined for good make an irresistible team."

No one, remarks the New York Sun, can fail to see the tremendous steps that have been taken toward a dry United States within the last ten or fifteen years. We read further:

"The Southern States, owing to their peculiar social conditions, are practically 'dry.' In all the States there is a marked tendency toward higher license fees, reduction in the number of drinking-places, and new restrictions on the hours in which, and the persons to whom, liquor may be sold. In this State the Republican party has suffered no setback at the polls from raising the liquor-license fees a few years ago, altho dire consequences were foretold for it if it persisted in doing so. The cry that the rights of saloon proprietors are invaded by hostile legislation has ceased to worry politicians except in the smallest political subdivisions of the

ONE SIDE'S ARGUMENT.

A saloon-keeper's campaign sign in a Delaware city.

the fact that they had not permitted a saloon within the town limits; and a number of papers lay particular stress upon the economic phases of the prohibition movement—a movement which, for half a century, was "jeered, not feared, by the saloon interests." As a Mississippi jurist puts it, "it is not a Puritanical States. The sentiment against the trade is recognized by the men in it, and at the recent convention of liquor-dealers the sensible advice of those who want to 'clean it up' was indorsed with practical unanimity."

According to a statement prepared by the National Temperance Society, which has its headquarters in New York City, considerably more than one-half of the area of the United States is now governed by some sort of prohibition law, the sale of liquor either being forbidden by State statute or through local-option laws. Says the New York Tribune:

"Publicity is the vehicle which the Prohibitionists hope will ultimately carry them to the passage of a national prohibition law. To this end nine general temperance papers, forty-four Woman's Christian Temperance Union papers, sixty-two Prohibition party papers, thirty Antisaloon League papers, and ten Good Templar papers are now being published. Active support also is received from the various church denominational papers."

Papers which are opposed to the spread of prohibition in the South lay much stress upon the argument that prohibition does not prohibit. Thus the Louisville Courier-Journal, whose criticisms of the movement have attracted much attention, says:

"They are having a fight in Maine over the prohibition law. Tho it was iron-clad to begin with and has lasted sixty-five years, it has not only not prohibited the use and abuse of intoxicants, but has failed to diminish drunkenness. It has promoted smuggling. It has promoted extortion. It has promoted adulterations and evasions, hypocrisy and lying. The single thing which it has not done has been to make Maine 'dry.' . . . No people except the Mohammedans have ever been able to maintain a prohibition law, and the Mohammedans supply the need for drink by death-dealing drugs."

Less pessimistic, but of the same conviction in regard to the efficacy of prohibition, is The Standard of Daphne, Ala., which says: "The history of prohibition of the liquor traffic shows that it does not prohibit the sale or use of liquors, and that the real value of a prohibition campaign is to be found in the education of the public as to the evils of the traffic." To the assertion that "blind tigers" will inevitably spring up in the wake of prohibitory laws Mr. Harris Dickson, writing in the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post, replies: "Yes, some—no human law entirely prevents an evil. But the internal-revenue licenses issued in this State [Alabama] show nine blind tigers in licensed territory for every one in prohibition territory. The question is not the saloon or the tiger, but the saloon and the tiger."

THE NEW JUGGERNAUT.
—McCutcheon in the Chicago Tribune.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH AMERICAN CITIES?

"WHEN America was organized the city was left out," writes Brand Whitlock in the November Circle, in explanation of the fact that there are few more serious problems before the country to-day, and perhaps none demanding more radical treatment than the problems of municipal government. That these problems are of no petty dimensions may be surmised from the budget tentatively adopted for New York City for 1908, which reaches the enormous total of $140,572,266.

While this sum includes the expenditures for the county governments within the area of the city, it does not include a number of items of current expenditure which are met by the proceeds of bond sales. After pointing out that the annual interest on New York's debt amounts to more than Chicago's entire bonded indebtedness, the Chicago Daily News suggests that the best municipal management would steer a middle course between "New York's wasteful extravagance and Chicago's wasteful parsimony."

Collier's Weekly remarks that the New York budget for 1908 "probably marks the high-water point of municipal expenditure in the world's history." "At the present time," the same publication adds, "the whole Empire of Japan runs its government, aside from interest on its war debt, for a little over two-thirds the cost of running the municipal government of the city of New York."

In the article quoted in our opening sentence Mr. Whitlock—who, as Mayor of Toledo, has acquired a practical as well as a theoretical knowledge of city politics—indicates the lines which he believes any adequate municipal reform must follow. But first he pauses to explain why there is so much need of reform in this particular branch of government. We read:

"The framers of the Constitution, who were the organizers, did the best they could, and wondrous well; but the modern city with its modern problems had not been dreamed of. Thus it happens that to-day the city is but an arm of the State; legally it has no powers that are not granted to it by the State legislature; hence it is ruled by the State legislature. And as there are generally about two countrymen to one city man in every State legislature, it follows that the cities are, in reality, governed by men who know nothing about cities and care nothing for them—men who view the city possibly with contempt, certainly with suspicion and distrust. And, primarily, that is what is the matter with the city.

"That something is the matter with the city has been the verdict of most men. There has been a pessimism almost enthusiastic about the city, and many cries for reform. Most men who class themselves with what is naively called the better element have declared for 'reform'; but the tremendous difficulty is to agree on what 'reform' is. All men, for instance, say that cities

BRAND WHITLOCK,

Author and reformer, who has just been re-elected Mayor of Toledo on an independent ticket, and is discust as a candidate for Governor of Ohio in next year's elections.

should be 'run' without graft, and most men really believe it. All men say that city government should be economically administered: that city business should be conducted as any private business is conducted. But beyond this, differences begin; and many who clamor the most loudly for reform clamor still more loudly against it when they see it. We may say, however, that everybody is for reform, provided it is proposed to reform somebody else.

"Out of all this has grown confusion; and civic federations, purity leagues, law and order leagues, have been organized without result. The good people who proposed these remedies thought that the evils of the city were the evils of individuals, of certain persons not associated with the 'better element,' and prayed that the control of things might be committed to the 'good people' or the 'business interests,' generally supposed to be perfect and kept from the general and infallible direction of things only by the machinations of certain of the evilly inclined."

In a recognition of the fact that "we must largely reform our system before we can reform our men," Mr. Whitlock sees a way of escape from confusion to efficiency. This, he says, is the lesson that Galveston learned in the face of its great calamity of 1900, and which Des Moines and other cities have learned from Galveston's example. In cities where that lesson has not been learned, says Mr. Whitlock, "whenever people try to do anything for themselves they find that the charter was not made for them, but for somebody else." Galveston's much-discussed scheme of municipal government by commission, and the spread of the experiment in the West and South, were described in THE LITERARY DIGEST of July 13. Mr. Whitlock dwells especially upon the charter adopted by Des Moines, which he describes as "the most democratic of any city in America." We read:

"The Galveston plan is simple. Four commissioners are elected by the people, and these four are the only officials elected. In these are centered all powers—they are mayor, council, and all the boards put together. They are responsible to the people, and to the people alone. Among these the administrative work is distributed.

"Des Moines has gone ahead of Galveston; she has all that Galveston has—so far as charters go—and more; she has a system that is far more democratic, far more radical than Galveston, or any other city in the United States, for that matter. Des Moines has abolished wards and boards, and all that, and has a commission like Galveston, in which the legislative, administrative, and executive functions are all centered; but she has other things, more democratic things. She has the recall, the initiative and referendum, including the compulsory reference of all franchises to the people. This is the great achievement of Des Moines; here, at last, is a chance for real democracy. If the board passes an ordinance which is not to the satisfaction of the people, they can compel its reference to them; they can vote on it, and either approve or disapprove it. This is the veto power retained by the people themselves—far better than the veto power in the hands of a mayor, or even of a governor. The people, too, if the board will not pass such legislation as the people want, can themselves initiate such legislation; this is the old New England town meeting on a large scale; and if any of the commissioners is faithless to his duty or his trust, the people may recall him; that is, remove and discharge him—far better and safer and more democratic than to have the removal power in the hands of a governor.

Another provision, and perhaps the most important, in the Des Moines charter is that which provides for non-partizan nominations and elections of municipal officers. Out there they have adopted and incorporated into their charter Golden Rule Jones's principle that a city official should be chosen with reference to his views on city questions, and not on State or national questions. The party system, carried down into the cities, has been the real bulwark of municipal corruption and inefficiency. A party boss will subscribe to any view on the tariff, provided you permit him to tell you whom to vote for. Party bosses and party machines and franchise corporations and all their pitiful parasites have long, in reality, been non-partizan; now that the people are becoming non-partizan, they will come into their own.

"The Des Moines plan seems to me defective in one way, and that is that by it men have to become candidates themselves, and this is not altogether in the spirit of real democracy. The people should propose their own nominees by petition; but the Des Moines plan in recognizing the principle of non-partizanship in municipal affairs has struck the key-note of real reform."

So far as charters and paper laws go, concludes Mr. Whitlock, the way to municipal reform lies along these lines:

"1. A charter that provides simply and directly for a few responsible officials, with a mayor and a small legislative or councilmanic board chosen from the city at large without reference to wards.

"2. Non-partizan nominations and elections.

"3. The initiative and the referendum, including the submission of all franchises to the people.

"4. The recall.

"5. The merit system for all employees other than heads of departments; and, most important of all,

"6. Home rule on all subjects of purely local nature, the right of taxation, and the police power so far as purely local."

In this direction, he thinks, we must travel, if we hope to achieve the ideal city "of which men have dreamed since time began."

THE DEPLETED ARMY

ALTHO the War Department is making every effort to induce reenlistments and to secure recruits, reports show that the Army is now 33 per cent. below its full authorized strength, and the problem of keeping it up even to its present numerical standard is becoming acute. Congress passed a law last year authorizing the addition of 5,000 men to the Coast Artillery; "but not only have the officials of the Army failed to get these extra 5,000 men," says a statement issued from the headquarters of the Artillery Corps, "but they have lost 2,000 of the men they had before." According to this statement, the difficulty of getting officers is practically as great. "For the first time in the history of the Army," we read, "vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant are going begging." The soldiers, says the same statement, "are quitting like rats leaving a leaky ship"—either by deserting or by purchasing their discharge. The chief causes of these conditions, it is generally agreed, are the general prosperity of the country, the higher wages within the reach of the civilian, and the general scarcity of labor. These causes are especially operative in the case of the Coast Artillery, in which the men, by the time they become proficient as soldiers, are really high-class skilled mechanics, says a Washington dispatch to the New York Tribune. From the same source we quote the following statements:

"One of the most striking instances of the depletion of the Army is shown by the case of the Tenth Company of Coast Artillery, which paraded in January, 1900, with 101 men in the ranks, but which, when called upon to parade on October 15 of this year, could muster only 14 men in the ranks, that being the total strength of the company. A hardly less striking instance is furnished, however, by the Seventh Infantry, which recently attended the McKinley memorial exercises at Canton. The entire regiment of twelve companies was ordered to Canton, and should have been about 1,200 strong. As a matter of fact, the twelve companies and the band were represented by only 406 men, while one company could muster only 10 privates fit for duty.

"A colonel of infantry in Nebraska reports to the War Department that in the vicinity of his post ordinary farm-hands are receiving from $30 to $50 a month and board, which makes the $13 a month of the soldier appear pitifully small, while many of his men have left the service and secured positions as clerks, engineers, street-car conductors, salesmen, linemen, firemen, etc., at salaries of not less than $75 a month, and in many instances at from $100 to $150 a month, the latter being secured as a rule by non-commissioned officers, who had received perhaps $18 a month in the service. Five men have left the Army at an infantry post in Texas to accept positions at from $125 to $150 a month.

"Perhaps the most frequent ground for dissatisfaction in the

Courtesy of "The Army and Navy Register."

A "BATTALION" OF INFANTRY.

This photograph, taken at Fort McDowell, Angel Island, Cal., shows the First Battalion of the Twenty-second Infantry at drill. The battalion was consolidated to make one company for drill purposes, but only three squads were the net result.

Army, after the smallness of the pay, is found in the frequent moves to which the commands are subjected. These entail almost invariably a change of uniform, and in some instances these have occurred so often that the men found nothing coming to them above their uniform account when pay-day arrived. Other causes of discontent include the foreign service, cutting a man off from his family and friends for long periods; the strenuous practise-marches recently insisted upon, which entail unusual labor and sometimes hardship; the inferiority of the food as compared with that obtainable by men of equal ability in civil life, and, in a few instances, the alleged harshness of officers, especially sergeants. Illustrative of the frequent changes of station, it may be recorded that one regiment has changed its station nineteen times since April, 1898, and has traveled more than 51,000 miles, while a number of regiments have travel records of more than 50,000 miles."

Representative J. A. T. Hull, chairman of the House Military Committee, has recently stated that the only way to keep up the regular Army is to pay the soldier more for his services. The Army and Navy Journal (New York) quotes non-committally from an article in the New Orleans Picayune, which asserts that if the United States should need 500,000 men for a war with a foreign Power it would be necessary to resort to compulsory measures to secure them. "There is," says The Picayune, "only one way in which this great Republic will ever be able to maintain a sufficient military strength, namely, by universal military service. Every young man in good health should be compelled to serve one or two years in the Army, or if that should furnish a superabundance of soldiers, then the conscription could be by lot."

The New York Tribune, while admitting that "for the modernized soldier the present rates of pay may be too low," thinks that "the real trouble with the Army lies deeper." What the Army needs, it urges, is "more fluidity in promotion and a fuller recognition of the fact that the day of the old unintelligent 'food-for-powder' soldier is over." The New York American makes the same point. It says further:

"The situation is the reverse of alarming; it simply means that this country is so prosperous that there is no inducement in time of peace to tempt young men to forego their civilian chances for thirteen dollars a month. There are too many industrial demands for men in perfect health and of the mental qualifications required by the military service for any considerable number to be charmed by the prospect of garrison duty.

"Nor does the scarcity of soldiers argue any diminution of the patriotic spirit. The very first hint that the country really needed soldiers would bring them in swarms as it has always brought them."

The Army and Navy Journal points out that even in time of peace there is need of a stronger military establishment. One of the practical arguments in favor of a considerable addition to the infantry arm of the service, it says, is "the increasing likelihood that Cuba will have to be considered a station for American troops for a long while to come."

CHANCELLOR DAY'S ATTACK ON THE PRESIDENT

"I SPEAK by no man's favor, nor am I restrained by any man's frown," asserts the Chancellor of Syracuse University in a foreword to "The Raid on Prosperity," a volume whose twenty chapters are devoted chiefly to championing the abused corporations and to reproving our erring President. Chancellor Day—who offers as his sufficient credentials the fact that he is an American citizen—is perturbed and incensed by "certain incidents in the administration of the government which I believe unwarranted by the Constitution, and in their tendency destructive to our liberties and the progress of our commerce." These incidents, we are told, carried to their logical and not distant conclusions, "must result in an oligarchy." Altho the Chancellor has raised this cry before, and has found it anything but a popular one, he returns to the attack in the present volume with unabated zeal. "A law-making, court-controlling executive department, a government by commissions, a personal construction of the Constitution," he explains, "is not a republic." And again: "The trial of business corporations in courts of the Administration, by a prosecuting Administration, the arraignment of citizens and their business by name in a condemnatory way, the characterization of private citizens offensively, and the commenting adversely upon men under indictment waiting trial, unseemly quarrels with the representatives of our highest official positions before an astonished civilized world, and gratuitous attacks upon citizens for their personal opinions and teachings have seemed to me so opposed to all our dignified traditions and such a menace to our boasted freedom as to justify an examination of some first principles." All this breathless accusation is merely preparatory to the volume proper. Turning to Chapter V., which opens with a protest against such "odious phrases and titles" as "Octopus," "Predatory Wealth," "Swollen Fortunes," and "Monopolist"—words which are the product of "one of the world's strange fanaticisms"—we read further:

Courtesy of "The Army and Navy Register."

A "COMPANY" AT FORT ANDREWS.

"The reactionists are the men who advocate 'stretching the Constitution,' who officially rebuke judges of the courts, who usurp legislation by dictatorial messages from the Executive office, who attempt to force receiverships as instruments of prosecution, who prosecute men in defiance of the ex-post-facto provision of the Constitution, who condemn men and prejudge them as undesirable citizens when their lives are in the judicial balances, who arraign men as criminals and then set in motion against them the machinery of the Federal courts and prosecuting department, who insist upon branding men as guilty who never have been indicted even in the cases alleged—as notoriously characterized a Federal court within the past summer in a great corporation case—who sentence men for alleged military offenses without evidence and without hearing, who investigate great business interests for alleged offenses and with a blare of trumpets condemn them—the innocent and the guilty alike—in all of the markets of the world, who by enforcing an impracticable law which the President has said would reduce business to chaos—a law which had lain dormant since its enactment because unjust, a law forbidding combination in business that has been the business practise of the country for a generation—and who upon such a law send business men of unquestioned integrity to jail, who threaten to interpret the Constitution so as to evade the reserved rights of the States and to establish paternal government by the subterfuge of post roads, who by agitation in speech and the public press disturb values and depreciate the properties and investments of millions of our people, both the rich and the poor—these are the real reactionists.

"The reactionists are playing to the gallery, and the gallery is becoming dangerously crowded for the safety of the structure of the body politic."

Turning to "the rights of corporate business," Chancellor Day asserts that "it would have been as foolish to make laws to slow down the locomotive in order to guard against the restraint of the stage-coach as it is to distract the corporation with laws and commissions to enable weaker men and small capital to carry on efficiently the same business." We do not want, he says, to make small business nor small men. "Small trade is at the demand of the trader, and not of the people." Therefore "it is a prodigious blunder to attempt by legislation to protect small forms of business." It will be remembered that Mr. Rockefeller, as quoted lately maintains that "the day of individual competition is past and gone." Great cooperative interests, says Dr. Day, "are not the product of human avarice nor of grinding indifference to popular rights." They "belong to the logic of events." With something like awe in his tone he goes on to speak of "our tremendous industrial movements" which "are comparable to the movements of the planets and the tides of the sea." To quote further:

"Interests of such vast extent which move by their momentum so irresistibly through long-established conditions, in many cases overthrowing smaller enterprises with all of the deep personal interest, as well as the commercial profit that attaches to them, are sure to be thought tyrannical, ruthless, grasping—the veritable octopus or pitiless dragon of avarice. The railway was oppressive when it set aside the stage-coach. But the stage-driver became the train-conductor."

THE POLES IN AMERICA

WE hear a great deal of the German, the Irish, and the Jewish elements in our cosmopolitan civilization, but very little about the part played by Polish immigration. Kosciuszko fought and Pulaski died for the cause of American independence, and at this day more than two millions of their fellow countrymen are settled in these United States, and are "rapidly becoming bone and sinew of American national life." But until Sienkiewicz's patriotic trilogy of historical novels found favor among us, "Poland was, of all civilized geographical entities, the least known to Americans." Our authority for these statements is Mr. Louis E. Van Norman in his "Poland, a Knight Among Nations." Mr. Van Norman believes that there is "a vital present significance to Americans" in the psychology of the Poles, who, with the Slovaks, are "the most representative of the Slav races that immigrate in large numbers to this country." Of the Poles particularly we learn that "they take kindly to American educational methods" and "are more assertive than the other members of the Slav stock that come here." Thus we are told that "they are not so submissive to the church, and have a greater national consciousness," but that they nevertheless identify themselves with American life, while "a large portion of the other Slavic peoples return to the countries whence they came." In 1905 there were in American universities and colleges five hundred and thirty-five sons of Polish mine-workers. To quote further:

"The Polish immigrants spread over our great West, and the cities of Buffalo, Chicago, Milwaukee, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Detroit, and Toledo are the main centers in which they congregate. In Chicago alone there are more than 250,000 of them, forming the largest Polish city in the world after Warsaw and Lodz. They come from all sections of the former Commonwealth, but principally from Galicia. They are, in general, industrious, frugal and soon amass a competency. Comparatively few professional men or members of the upper social classes have come to this country except for political reasons, as the love for the fatherland is so strong in the Polish heart, altho a few such spirits as Modjeska and her husband have lived here. . . .

"With all their national love for ceremony and social intercourse, the American Poles have many organizations through which they satisfy their social and military instincts. The Polish National Alliance, educational and benevolent, with a membership of over fifty thousand, is the strongest of these organizations, but there are many others with more limited fields. In the United States the Polish national movement is conducted under the auspices of this Polish National Alliance (Zwiazek Narodowy Polski). The membership of this organization is increasing at the rate of from six thousand to seven thousand a year. The Alliance has nothing to do with party politics, but aims primarily to make the Polish residents of the United States good citizens of the land of their adoption without forgetting their Polish tongue and traditions. It endeavors to perpetuate the knowledge of the Polish language, literature, and history, and to lend organized assistance to the cause of Polish independence in Europe. In the Alliance building in Chicago is published the Zgoda, the official organ of the Alliance, a well-edited weekly magazine with a circulation of fifty thousand."

TOPICS IN BRIEF

A NEWSPAPER wit speaks of it as The Vague Peace Conference.—Florida Times Union.

SEVERAL of the New York banks now know how it feels to get a run for their money.—The Washington Post.

JAPAN is not worrying over the American fleet. Why should it? Japan is not paying the coal bills.—The Daily News.

WALL STREET rails at Washington, but when its fingers are burned it knows where to turn for salve.—San Francisco Call.

KING MENELEK, of Abyssinia, has decided to have a Cabinet. Favorite sons and assisted booms may be expected to develop in Abyssinia in due time.—Boston Transcript.

"A BALLOON race is a colorless affair," is a current comment. Colorless, perhaps, but there's lots of atmosphere.—New York Evening Mail.

THE North Side has a burglar who forces pantry windows. With provisions at their present prices this is more profitable than blowing safes.—Chicago Evening Post.

SUPPORTERS of Mr. Fairbanks assert that he will make no pledges during the race for the nomination. It may be necessary for him to sign one, tho.—The Washington Post.

THE reason that "prison yawns for the men who have misapplied the funds of confiding depositors" is that prison has gotten so tired waiting for them.—The New York Commercial.

FOREIGN COMMENT

ENGLISH VIEWS OF THE PANIC AND THE PRESIDENT

THE London papers are full of telegrams on the Wall-Street situation conveying news and predictions of the direst character, but while it is allowed by the London Economist that this is one of the worst experiences within the history of Wall Street, yet this weighty financial organ declines to take a blue view of our situation. And, indeed, the opinions of the English press upon the matter are largely optimistic, and they repeat that no permanent injury to American prosperity is likely to result from the incident. It is a moral rather than a monetary cause which they point out as underlying the disturbance, and they suggest a reform of American banking laws as clearly called for. What a newspaper has called "the Roosevelt panic" not a single English journal holds the President of the United States responsible for. The alleged exploitation of banks by unscrupulous syndicates is spoken of by the London Economist as largely accountable for the difficulty, and this organ of high finance observes:

"It is quite clear . . . that, whether the course of conduct alleged has or has not been engaged in, the American system of banking, and the laxness both of the law and of its administration in New York, render the practise at least quite possible."

And The Statist (London) calls for a moral remedy as well. Thus we read:

"We do not for one moment imagine that human nature in the States is more depraved than in Europe, or that the standard of commercial honesty is naturally lower. But the tariff has accustomed manufacturers to the idea that it is honest to fleece the public, and successful money-making has become the standard by which suitability for the control of great corporations and industries is measured. Credit, it can never be too frequently repeated, is not founded upon gold, but upon confidence. The public distrust in the States can not be cured by gold, silver, or notes. It has a moral, as well as a material, foundation."

Commenting in the same tone The Daily Mail (London) remarks:

"Our company laws are not perfect, but they afford an infinitely greater measure of security than those of the United States, which differ in the various States, and in some can scarcely be said to exist at all. And while the Socialists are always with us, and will be always a menace to the prosperity of the state, the movement against capital has gone further in the United States and gathered far more force than it has as yet acquired here. By all the signs, all Mr. Roosevelt's energy and courage will be needed to stem this movement, when he has at last cut away the unsound growth from American business and punished the guilty millionaires."

Mr. Roosevelt, thinks the London Times, has been "impudently" slandered by those who attribute the panic to his mistakes. As a matter of fact the course which he has taken was actually necessary if the future credit of the country is to be preserved. As this authority says:

"According to some interested parties, the President is to blame for having vigorously called attention to the reckless and selfish proceedings of individuals and corporations, and for having thus, it is impudently asserted, caused all the trouble; but well-wishers to the United States are not likely to take that view, and will applaud him for having faced so boldly a powerful body of able men who have been too much accustomed to have their own way, regardless of public welfare and public rights. No one need fear for the economic future of the United States merely because a mau has been found who is courageous enough to tell the people he serves that some of their business practises are wrong and dangerous."

The "magnates" whom the President's procedure has rounded up and brought to book can not lay the blame on their accuser, observes The Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette (London). To quote from a recent editorial:

"For our part we can not believe that Mr. Roosevelt can be held responsible. From the moment when the antitrust campaign of democracy was answered by the antitrust campaign of Republicanism, a breach in the walls of 'bossism' was inevitable. For the magnates were between hammer and anvil."

"In the end good must come of all this trouble, tho the just must suffer with the unjust, and more than the unjust, because, as usual, 'the unjust has the just's umbrella.' Meanwhile, from a selfish point of view, we may say that these events throw a flood of valuable light on a condition of things largely incomprehensible, yet clear enough to convey the plainest warning. From America we may learn how not to do it."

Other journals speak quite optimistically of the tottering houses and vanishing fortunes of Wall Street, and thus calmly and lucidly does the London Spectator attempt to reassure those who in Eng-

INTERNATIONAL MARRIAGES.

UNCLE SAM—"What a fool of a farmer I am! All my labor is spent in spreading fertilizer at the roots of this ancestral tree so that these thundering aristocrats may show a green twig or two."

—Humoristische Blätter (Vienna).

land or elsewhere are beginning to think that the financial crisis in New York may lead to wider complications abroad. "The gravity of the situation has been very much exaggerated," we read. To quote further:

"Tho there is much confusion and perturbation in New York, and tho a good many people, rich and poor, will lose a great deal of money, there is not the slightest cause for anything approaching international anxiety. Indeed, the net result, as far as the public here is concerned, might be summed up as follows: 'Many people will have to sell what are actually valuable stocks at a great sacrifice, and many other people for a week or two will be able to pick up those valuable stocks at excellent bargains.' There has been no actual destruction of wealth, as in a catastrophe like the San Francisco fire and earthquake, and therefore no diminution of the volume of property, but merely the end of a financial dream. A large number of people in New York are finding that they are not really as rich as they thought they were, or, to put it in another way, that the companies in which their money was invested are not nearly as sound and prosperous concerns as they imagined, and that therefore they have been living in a fool's paradise. But just as the dream of prosperity was largely unreal, so to a very considerable extent the dream of ruin is unreal. Or again, just as the dream of advantage went for a time too far, so the dream of disadvantage has also gone too far and things are not nearly as black as they seem."

Those who accuse President Roosevelt of causing the panic are thus scathingly dealt with:

"With a hardihood which, if the matter was not so serious, might be described as comic, a section of the great millionaires and financial kings, when thus detected in malpractices, have turned upon the President and those who support him, and blamed them for declaring that the law of the land must be enforced as sternly against great capitalists as against the petty trader. Mr. Roosevelt's policy, they assert, is shaking the very foundations of the national credit and drying up the sources of industry. The accusation is peculiarly impudent. The men who have shaken the credit of the nation are not those who have exposed the misdeeds, but those who have done them. It is not because Mr. Roosevelt has demanded obedience to the law, but because of the revelations of repeated and glaring breaches of the law, that public confidence in the business methods of so many great commercial and financial undertakings has been destroyed. If a panic were to take place, owing to an enormous number of unpunished burglaries, what should we think if the burglars lectured the police authorities on having provoked the panic by their policy of prosecution, and by their reckless use of evidence in regard to the doings of the criminals? Would not they be told that if the burglars would give up burglary there would be no need of prosecutions, and no fear of panic?"

TREAT IRELAND LIKE THE TRANSVAAL

NOTHING seemed to touch the heart of Europe so keenly as England's treatment of General Botha. This man had proved her brave and stubborn antagonist in South Africa. Now he is a trusted administrator of imperial authority in the same region. A writer in The Contemporary Review (London) thinks that Ireland ought at least to have the same privileges as England's dependency in the Black Continent. Mr. William O'Brien, who ranks among British politicians as a very acute Irish Nationalist and a determined follower of Parnell, thinks that England would vastly increase her strength if she treated Ireland as she has treated her Dutch subjects in South Africa. The words in which he expresses these views are as follows:

"Nobody will contest that from the point of view of Imperial strength and even of Imperial commerce, the friendship of Ireland would be of more solid worth to England than half-a-dozen Transvaals. Nevertheless, while Mr. Winston Churchill has a free hand to content the Boers, Mr. Birrell is pinched even by his friends and raved at by the Imperialists par sang, when he offers the smallest satisfaction to Ireland. The excuse is, forsooth, the fear of rebellion in Ireland—in Ireland, where there has not been for more than a century an insurrection that required the services of a company of soldiers to put it down. Eight years have not passed since England was sustaining at the hands of General Botha and his brother generals a series of humiliations such as she scarcely sustained in all her wars against Napoleon; yet nobody any longer finds it strange that the Boers it took so much blood and treasure to conquer should, after this short probation, receive in flowing measure the liberties Ireland through five-sixths of her representatives has been demanding in vain for generations. It seems the most natural thing in the world that the rebel generalissimo should find himself called to the councils of the King and acclaimed by the most Imperialist mob in England. The way to fit men for liberty, Gladstone once truly said, is to give them liberty. But, in the case of Ireland, a band of frolicsome schoolboys has only to hiss 'God Save the King,' or a newspaper to publish an article blaspheming the Royal Dublin Fusiliers, or a member of Parliament hard up for any more effective form of demonstration to direct a cattle-drive with his umbrella, and the pontiffs of Imperial journalism to go into hysterics at the thought of entrusting such monsters with the liberties which have turned the slightly more formidable sharpshooters of the Boer kopjes into an army of friends."

WOULD SOCIALISM PREVENT WAR?

THE Socialists of Europe loudly proclaim that standing armies are necessitated by the existence of capitalism, and that war springs from the principle of private property. Socialism, collectivism, state ownership, we are told, would eliminate or at least diminish the probability of conflict between the nations and would eventually bring back the Saturnian age of peace and plenty. This position is challenged by the eminent publicist and economist Paul Leroy-Beaulieu, of the French Institute. Writing in the Économiste Française (Paris), he declares that war has nothing to do with the question of private property, capitalism, or state ownership. In his own words:

"To say that the institution of private property excites and favors war is absurd. History proves that the majority of wars spring from race antagonism and popular passion. The so-called capitalistic interests are much better promoted by peace than by war. Merchants, manufacturers, landed proprietors, even financiers, all those, in a word, who are to be called owners, consider war as something to be dreaded, a disturbance in the order of things which at any moment may bring ruin upon them. Without being antimilitarists they are pacifists in the full sense of the term."

This learned writer admits that the Boer war was indeed brought about by the financial schemes of the gold-miners in South Africa, but even in this case, he adds, we must not lose sight of another motive. The spirit of imperialism which pervades the English nation could not tolerate close rivalry within the same territory. Mr. Leroy-Beaulieu then proceeds to show that Socialistic collectivism would make the danger of war still greater than it is at present. He writes:

"Socialism or collectivism, far from eliminating or even diminishing the causes of war, would largely increase them. The transformation of all economic relations between the various nations into affairs of state would multiply the points of contact and friction between the various governments. Such friction as now occurs between individuals would thus become international. Consider two aspects only of this problem, namely, the interchange of merchandise and the migration of people from one

AFTER THE PEACE CONFERENCE.

NELIDOFF—"Have you any further orders for me, my lady?"
PEACE—"Thank you, but I'd like to be let alone and finish my nap, and please order some one to open the windows and clear the air."
—Amsterdammer.

nation to another. How could a collectivist system regulate these? Should the several governments undertake the acquisition and exportation of all national merchandise, what complications, what conflicts would naturally arise! Still more serious would be the question of emigration. Even under the present system frequent disputes between different governments arise on the subject of emigration and the treatment of emigrants and the limitation in number of foreigners to be admitted into the country. But when the transportation of emigrants is made a matter of state policy both in the countries of teeming population and those of less thickly populated territory, there would be still more serious ground for conflicts. National jealousies would burst out more fiercely and more violently among the lower classes of the peoples, as is proved by the attack on the Japanese and Chinese by the people of California, and on all emigrants whatsoever by the people of Australia. There is no doubt whatever that under a collectivist régime wars would be more frequent, more prolonged, and more cruel than ever."—Translation made for THE LITERARY DIGEST.

THE DANGER OF AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN DISRUPTION AVERTED

THE fears aroused among the press and diplomats of Europe by the recent critical illness of the venerable Francis Joseph of Austria were increased by the fact that Austria and Hungary had had no formal agreement, or Ausgleich, since 1897, so that the Crown was the only bond holding them together. It was much the same as if our Constitution had to be renewed every ten years, and the country had been working along for the past ten years without one, the fact of union being maintained by general consent, without the form. The possible disruption of the Empire at the death of the Emperor aroused in the minds of far-sighted editorial observers the vision of two little states too weak to resist the aggressions of Germany, Italy, and Russia, in place of an empire that is considered a valuable and desirable ally. This peril has been averted by the conclusion of a new treaty that is to run for ten years more. The chief feature of the new agreement is the increase of Hungary's share in the financial burden of the Empire from 34.4 per cent. under the old arrangement to 36.4 per cent. under the new. They have a saying in Vienna that Hungary enjoys two-thirds of the power in the Empire for one-third of the cost, because the Hungarian Government is almost solidly Mag-

AS THEY SEE IT.

THE PARENTS—"No angel was so sweet and mild
As this our darling little child."

—Floh (Vienna).

yar, and in case of dispute can generally win by bringing one or more of the many jarring factions of the Austrian Government around to its side. The Austrian Poles, for instance, are usually only too glad to help defeat their Government on almost any prop-

ARCHDUKE FRANZ FERDINAND OF AUSTRIA,
With his wife and children. |

He is heir presumptive to the Imperial throne and is nephew to the present Emperor, who has no sons. He married Countess Sophia Chotek, now Princess of Hohenberg, but was compelled previously to duly renounce the right of their future offspring to the thrones of Austria and Hungary.

osition. This resource is not always resorted to—the knowledge that it is possible being generally enough to bring Austria to terms. The remarkable result, as frequently spoken of in the European papers, is that the 9,000,000 Magyars, who are in an actual minority in Hungary, not only rule their own country, but dominate the Empire, which has a total population of 45,000,000. The new agreement is in the form of a treaty, as between two independent states, and the Koelnische Zeitung thinks that "no one can fail to see that Hungary, being thus acknowledged as a separate kingdom through a treaty, and not a mere agreement, looks upon the new compact only as a ten-year makeshift bringing her gradually nearer to independence. It is in this hope she has consented to undertake a heavier burden of revenue contribution."

The official organ of the Austrian Government, the Fremden-Blatt (Vienna), naturally quotes with approval the words of Dr. Wekerle, the Hungarian Prime Minister. "In the interests of our national consolidation and for the advancement of our internal prosperity," he says, "we deprecate all conflict in this present political movement." The following comment on the treaty is added:

"We see in the treaty a harbinger of wider development both for Austria and Hungary. Both countries demand a free hand in the management of their own domestic affairs, and both have now found a solid foundation on which to build. All the benefits of the treaty which Baron Beck expects to be reaped by Austria will also be reaped by Hungary."

"People always like to see those who live in the same house dwell together in harmony," says the Vossische Zeitung (Berlin), but it fails to see anything in the agreement that changes the political prospect in Europe. "The pressing matters" with which the treaty deals, declares the London Times, "have little interest outside the two states concerned." But Baron Beck is quoted in the Neue Freie Presse (Vienna) as publicly affirming that—

"A mighty change has come over the destinies of peoples, and their fates have more often been decided by the fluctuations of the exchange than the result of a battle. The two states of this Empire, if united, may help to control the exchanges of the world. If divided, Austria and Hungary fall under the control of greater Powers. Upon the economic harmony of the two governments depends our political strength, and hence the treaty enters deeply into the sphere of foreign policy."

While some dissatisfaction is heard in Hungary at the increased contribution demanded of the Government by the new compact, the Pester-Lloyd, the leading paper among educated Hungarians, speaks thus of the new impost:

"Hungary is not too poor to pay for the political and economic advantages which this treaty secures to her. And indeed this increase of two per cent. does not make so big a bite into her finances as gives her the right to consider herself victimized. . . . After all, the treaty is a compromise which the needs and interests of both states made necessary. It is a measure of pacification reconciling once more Hungary and the Austrian monarchy."—Translations made for THE LITERARY DIGEST.

REPUBLICAN FRANCE THE HOPE OF EUROPE

FRANCE has been sometimes called a boastful and egotistical country, and certain it is, at any rate, that those of her sons who write about her are not apt to understate her importance. Speaking of the war-cloud which ever seems to be hovering over Europe, Mr. E. Reybel says that there are not lacking causes to bring about a "world war." The political air is charged with electricity. It needs only a spark to bring about such an explosion as will ravage the whole civilized world and destroy all the fair and fruitful works of progress which have signalized our modern days. But the position of things is not altogether hopeless. France, which has been the leader in Europe for so many centuries, France, mother of letters, art, and political freedom, can alone avert the storm. To quote his confident words in La Revue (Paris):

"There is only one Power that can yet preserve us from this bloody catastrophe, and that is republican France. She holds in her hands the destiny of the world. Without her support England will not dare to attack Germany. And if, in the case of Germany's attacking England, France should promise all her aid to her London friends, William II., in spite of all, would hesitate to unchain the dogs of war. The republican Government has its duty all mapped out. It must avoid all cause of conflict with its eastern neighbors, inoculated as they are by the warlike tarantula. The French press have recently assumed a commendable attitude of self-control. Our journals must maintain this course of action. William II. must not be afforded any ground for indulging in the warlike diversion by which he seeks to retard in his Empire the democratic evolution which must result in the triumph of republicanism."

For already the Germans see in France, he argues, not only the arbiter of peace in Europe, but also the example which they themselves must follow if their beloved country is to advance to its highest destiny. Mr. Reybel enlarges on this point and speaks with a Gallic ardor which will scarcely be agreeable to those German circles which are not included in the ranks of what he styles "the young German democracy." He writes:

"France offers to Germany, even on her frontiers, the spectacle of a mighty example. To the German nation, which has just shaken off its torpor, and is gazing through age-long mists at the lofty ideal of liberty and justice, she shows how a great nation is able to govern itself by the free play of institutions which she has herself erected. This France has done without that monarch, emperor, or king who would be certain to intervene without limit, and thus defeat or corrupt the design of the nation. France proves that a republican nation is not condemned to failure, perpetual humiliation, destitution, and weakness, but develops, advances, and prospers on the path of progress and general civilization, and this much more rapidly than is possible in monarchical countries. Already our republican liberties have roused the envy of the Germans, crushed, gagged, and tortured by a rude, a brutal police administration. The Germans have neither the liberty of the press nor of assembly, excepting in a limited degree. Their parliament is without authority, their universal suffrage imperfect and fictitious. And thus our Republic to-day is the ideal toward which the popular parties of Germany, daily growing more powerful at the polls, are directing their glance. It is the duty of our Republic to continue what she is, and prove the vanguard on the march toward that ideal of justice and universal harmony in which democracy consists. She must ceaselessly develop herself along the lines of peace, and prove the torch which guides the course of the young German democracy, feeble and vacillating as this democracy so far has been, but bound to grow and flourish in the future."

This writer closes with an encouraging reference to "democratic Germany" whom France is to lead into the "Land of Promise" where she herself has already set up her republican tabernacle. Mr. Reybel tells us:

"We will fight Germany with the weapons of peace," exclaimed Gambetta, in the presence of a brave Alsatian. This was a little before his death. If he alluded to warlike Germany, the despotic and brutally governed Germany of the Hohenzollerns, he spoke well. But there is another Germany, laborious, peaceful, enlightened, and just, a democratic Germany, whose aspirations are perhaps soon to be fulfilled, and with whom we shall have no need to fight, for it is our duty to hasten her triumph."—Translation made for THE LITERARY DIGEST.

A FRENCH admiral has expressed the opinion that in constructing the Dreadnought we have made a great mistake. Still, we shall have the satisfaction of having misled our rivals, all of whom are busy copying her.—Punch

It is reported that the Emperor William brought down 2,603 pheasants in a three-days' battue. Of course this does not include the many poor birds which fell down dead from sheer awe at the mere sight of him.—Wahre Jacob.

THE AGE OF AIR-SHIPS.

THE MARTIAN ASTRONOMER (in 1950)—"Through my new telescope I see that the earth is surrounded with a ring like that of Saturn. It does not form a complete mass, but consists of separate particles which revolve round the planet in an unbroken orbit."

—Ulk (Berlin).

SCIENCE AND INVENTION

HOW TO GET RID OF TATTOO-MARKS

A TATTOOED design is usually regarded as ineffaceable. The colors will not fade and are practically as permanent as the natural pigment of the skin. This is unfortunate, for probably a large proportion of those who tattoo in haste subsequently repent at leisure, and as the marking is commonly done in youth, the period of repentance is unpleasantly long. It would seem, however, that for those who have not indulged too deeply in this form of art, there is a way out, in the form of what is practically a surgical removal of the colored tissue. Several methods are described in an article in La Nature (Paris), but it would appear that the bearer of an extensive area of tattooed ornamentation would hardly care to undergo the necessary pain and inconvenience for its removal. Says the paper just named:

"Tattooing, of which there is a trace in the highest antiquity, and which has been practised among many peoples, was employed originally as a means of ornamentation. In Polynesia it takes the place of clothing. It was also a means of recognition, a distinctive mark of tribal relationship. In our own time and in European lands, it is found as a professional symbol, different bodies having tattoo-marks indicating occupations. Among criminals tattooing is extremely common; as a pastime of prisoners it is practised by accomplished experts, and Professor Lacassagne has gathered in his museum of legal medicine more than 2,000 designs tattooed on the skin of 550 individuals. Soldiers and sailors make up another large contingent of tattooed persons; in 1853 Hutin found 506 such among 3,000 soldiers living at the Invalides.

"Several years ago the fashion of tattooing made its way into high society, following the example of a prince who caused a monogram to be tattooed on his arm. Every man and every woman—for the contagion affected both sexes—desired a tattooed design, blue, pink, or red, on a finger or an arm. This fashion is now, I believe, out of date, and more than one tattooed person would not be sorry to do away with a mark that is no longer regarded as a beauty-spot.

"The methods of eradicating a tattooed design are numerous; they all involve the destruction of the derma of the skin in which are contained the pigmentary grains that form the design. Dr. Berchon, who has studied the question from both the ethnologic and medico-legal points of view, was consulted one day by a rich man who asked him to remove a tattooed design that had been made in his youth and doubtless reminded him too constantly of his humble beginnings. Berchon, a well-read man, used the ancient method of Crito, described by Paul of Aegina. Crito washed the tattooed part with niter and then enveloped it in resin, which was allowed to remain several days to soften the skin. The design was then scraped with a sharp instrument, the wound was washed and rubbed with salt, after which a sort of plaster was applied, consisting of frankincense, nitrate of potash, lye, lime, wax, and honey. Several days later the marks disappeared."

The modern methods, we are told, are derived from the ancient; the most radical, when the tattooing is limited, is to remove the skin entirely and to graft on a healthy piece, or to sew the adjoining parts together, if the wound is not too large. But this necessarily leaves a scar, more or less visible. The classic blister-plaster of cantharides, pomades of acetic acid, or lotions of dilute acids will efface the design, and thus criminals have a whole arsenal of heroic measures to cheat justice and wipe out marks of identification. To quote further:

"Dr. Everard has recently indicated a very effective process that may be used on delicate skins or in parts where the skin is very fine, as on the face, without the production of a thick, lasting scar. This method is described by the author as follows: Apply to the part a small blister-plaster, covering the whole region affected; leave this in place till a blister appears. When the epidermis has been well raised, it is removed, exposing the true skin, and the tattoo-marks are then effaced by thermo-cautery, after anesthetizing the region with a solution of cocain. The cautery is applied not on the lines of the design alone, but on all parts of the surface, so as to leave none of the old tissue. The red-hot wire is passed over the skin until it becomes brown or calcined, like the wood in pyro-engraving. There is then applied a pomade of ten-per-cent. salicylic acid covered with a bandage of muslin or cloth to prevent drying. . . . On the third or fourth day a scab will become detached and the tattoo-marks will have disappeared.

"It would seem that the application of a blister before the cautery is somewhat superfluous; nevertheless, the author expressly recommends it, for the production of a black, adherent scab is thus obviated. By proceeding as indicated above, all traces of artificial pigmentation with indigo or carmine may be caused to disappear; an evident scar remains, but it appears to be simply that due to a blister, or a large vaccination-mark, or, if the wound is somewhat extensive, to a burn. It is not colored, and the original design totally disappears, having dropt off with the scab. To render the scar tissue as soft and as little apparent as possible, a moist application must be made after the removal of the scab, such as a compress wet with picric-acid solution, afterward drying with talcum powder. Only an insignificant trace of the original design will then remain."—Translation made for THE LITERARY DIGEST.

GREEK TEMPLES AND PILE-DWELLINGS

THAT the Doric temple of ancient Greece derived its form from the still more ancient pile-dwelling inhabited by the lake-dwellers of Central Europe, is an interesting theory advanced by Dr. Paul Sarasin, of the Berlin Anthropological Society, in a recent issue of the Zeitschrift für Ethnologie. Our quotations, below, are from a review by Prof. Alexander F. Chamberlain, of Clark University, in The Popular Science Monthly (New York, November). It has been suggested more than once that the Greek temple, once regarded as absolutely unique and original, is really a glorified imitation of some previously existing wooden structure. According to Professor Fuchs, this is the house of the rich cattle-breeders of the Central-European plateau. Professor Chamberlain, while entertaining no doubt that the marble temple had a wooden prototype, inclines rather to the less local theory advanced by Sarasin, which he sets forth as follows:

"According to Sarasin, the Greek temple with columns 'is a highly idealized and conventionalized expression of the original pile-dwelling'—the columns are the piles, the ornamented superstructure the dwelling fixt upon them, the triglyphs the window-strips, the metope the partition, etc. In order to fully appreciate the merits of Sarasin's theory one must bring up before the mind the wooden forerunner of the Doric peripteros: 'The columns were wooden pillars, the architraves wooden beams, the triglyphs wooden strips, the metopes boards with carved ornament; the wooden roof was covered with mud-thatch, and the wooden ridge ended in a bird made of cut boards (the acroterion).' Reducing the height of the columns a little, and increasing somewhat that of the superstructure, one has a building strikingly similar to (in many respects identical with) the pile-dwelling. The figures of the temple of Poseidon at Pæstum and a pile-dwelling in Central Celebes show this very clearly. And it should be said that the pile-dwellings of Indonesia, occurring on land as well as in water, represent better a 'pile-dwelling period' than the 'reconstructed' lake-dwellings of Switzerland. During the later stone age and the bronze age, Dr. Sarasin thinks, moreover, pile-dwellings of a sort comparable with those to be met with in Celebes were found over a considerable portion of Europe, not merely in lakes, rivers, etc., but also in swamps and on the dry land. . . . In Greece and many other parts of the then known world, the original human dwelling was the house on piles, which, therefore, was also the first dwelling of the gods, and the first temple—the orthodox temple, as Sarasin phrases it—was a pile-dwelling. In very ingenious fashion Sarasin shows how the peculiarities of the various portions of the Greek temple can be developed from the pile-dwelling."

The basis of the Ionic and Corinthian columns, Professor Sarasin thinks, is to be seen in the stones placed under the piles to prevent decay. The so-called echinus, the lower, round portion of the capital, corresponds to a similar disk of stone or wood placed on the piles as a protection against rats, etc. The abacus is a rest-piece for the beams, on the middle of the disk. The so-called proto-Doric columns of Egypt, which lack the echinus, go back, Sarasin suggests, to a pile-dwelling without such protective disks. The perpendicularity of Ionic and Corinthian columns, as well as the slight upper inclination of the Doric, are referred to the various conditions of the piles and their arrangement. To quote further:

Courtesy of "The Scientific American."

CONSTRUCTION OF THE WHEEL-SKATES.

"The so-called adricula, according to Sarasin, is derived, not from the tent, as some have supposed, but from the small shade-roof seen in front of many Celebean pile-dwellings, under which the occupants sit protected from sun and rain. The 'wall-temples' and the cella are easily developed from the open space under the dwelling in the pile-houses by building in between the columns—the prototypes are seen in the Celebean houses. The transformation of the upper part of the pile-dwelling, when no longer used for habitation, into the superstructure of the Greek temple with its ornamentation (the frieze has its forerunner in the pile-dwelling's wooden carvings, etc.) was easily possible with an artistically minded people. The substitution of stone for wood, Dr. Sarasin thinks, may have been an Egyptian invention.

"If the present writer may be permitted to add to the ideas set forth by Dr. Sarasin, he would like to suggest the possibility of the existence of pile-dwellings in caves (such have been reported from prehistoric Sicily) having had something to do with the development of the original wooden pile-dwelling into the stone temple.

Courtesy of "The Scientific American."

SKATE-WHEEL WITH MOTOR ATTACHED.

about 1500 B.C., which are practically identical in shape, etc., with pile-dwellings still to be seen in the Nicobar Islands and in certain parts of Africa.

"Taken altogether, Sarasin's essay is one of the most interesting and suggestive contributions to the literature of the evolution of architecture that have appeared in a generation, and it illustrates the way in which the anthropological investigator can assist in the solution of many puzzling problems, which meet with no successful interpretation at the hands of the closet-student or the biased classicist. Dr. Sarasin has given but another proof of the fact that the highest genius of the ancient Greeks lay not in inventing great or beautiful things out-of-hand, but in idealizing, beautifying, and harmonizing what had already long existed in common and wide-spread forms and fashions. And to that great art no human race is utterly a stranger; and many of them are much nearer the Greeks than most of us believe."

A NEW "ROLLER"-SKATE

THE ordinary roller-skate can be used only on a smooth, hard surface. Many attempts have been made, with more or less success, to devise a wheeled skate that will travel over ordinary roads. Common roller-skates can not be used on macadam roads because the rollers are so small that they drop into every depression and check the progress of the skater. Large wheels are evidently necessary, but these, if placed directly under the skater's feet, will raise him dangerously high. The difficulty, however, seems to have been solved by a Swiss inventor, Mr. M. Koller, of

Courtesy of "The Scientific American."

On level ground; brake lifted.

Traveling downhill; brake applied.

WHEEL-SKATES FOR USE ON ORDINARY ROADS.

Winterthur, who has designed a skate described as follows by the Berlin correspondent of The Scientific American (New York, October 26):

"It will be observed that the skates are each provided with a single wheel which is about a foot in diameter. The skater's foot is supported below the center of the wheel, and in order that the tread may come directly below the center of the skater's foot the wheel is set on a slant. The wheels are dished, comprizing a disk of corrugated metal connecting the hub with the rim, and also a series of tension spokes which serve to stiffen them. The foot support is suspended on a hanger attached to the wheel axle, and it is provided with a pair of braces extending upward to support a strap which is fastened around the skater's leg above the ankle. To prevent the wheels from rolling backward a brake is attached to the foot support and bears against the inner periphery of the wheel rim. This brake is normally out of action, but is automatically set as soon as the wheel starts to reverse its direction. If desired, this brake may be thrown out of action completely to permit the skater to perform various fancy figures.

"In addition to the brake just described, the wheel for the left foot is provided with a rearwardly extending arm which the skater may use as a drag to retard his motion. The wheel for the right foot is provided with a similar drag-arm which also has in connection with it a brake-block that bears against the inner periphery of the wheel when the drag-arm bears against the ground, thus furnishing the skater with a quick-acting brake for use in emergencies. One of the illustrations shows this brake in use. The inventor also proposes to use a motor in connection with each skate-wheel, which will be attached in the manner indicated in the diagram. The wheel will be driven by belts running from the power shaft of the motor to a pulley-groove on the felly of the wheel. Fuel for the motor can be supplied from a tank strapped to the back of the skater. It is claimed that wheel-skating can be learned in a very short time, beginners having acquired the knack of using them with safety in a few minutes."

TRANSATLANTIC WIRELESS

THE advantages of the wireless system of communication across the Atlantic are remarked by The Electrical Review (New York) to be its cheapness and probable freedom from serious breakdown. Its drawback is the difficulty of preventing interference between stations. "If every one else must be silent while one of us is talking to Australia, the system is, in one sense, handicapped." It is actually working, however; long messages are transmitted daily, and "the possibilities are very great." Other inventors may claim a share in the beginnings of this great work, but, continues the writer:

"Whatever may be the outcome of this telegraphic development, certainly Mr. Marconi must be given all credit, not only for the truly wonderful work he has done, but also for his faith in the system and his persistency in carrying it from good to better. To-day he is applauded by all the world for his magnificent achievement, and his work is greeted by the wondering praise of people grown accustomed to modern wonders, but who, to-morrow, when 'little men, of little souls, rise up to buy and sell again,' will turn to some new feat, forgetting the real importance to civilization of the system which Marconi has put into service."

In a leading editorial on the subject The Scientific American (New York, October 26) praises "the intelligence and indomitable perseverance" of Marconi in his six-years' struggle to "achieve the seemingly impossible." It says:

"It is certain that among the many names which will always be honorably associated with the development of wireless telegraphy, that of the young Anglo-Italian will ever hold the place of honor. We say this with full knowledge of the fact that the foundation for his accomplishment was laid over thirty years ago, when Clerk Maxwell, in an address to the Royal Society, defined the character of the ether-waves and predicted the possibility of wireless telegraphy by means of electric magnetic waves. Nor are we forgetful of the fact that in 1887 Professor Hertz, by the announcement of his discoveries, earned the right to give his name to the etheric waves which Marconi and his contemporaries have turned to such good account."

"Marconi's experimental work in transatlantic communication dates from that notable day in December, 1901, when from his position at the top of a lofty promontory at the entrance to St. John's harbor, Newfoundland, he received from his station in Cornwall, England, an agreed-upon signal, the letter S. Encouraged by this success, Marconi commenced the erection of a powerful station at Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, where four huge braced towers were built at the corners of a square, and an elaborate system of aerial wires or antennæ strung from them and led down to the sending and receiving station below them in the center of the square. A year later actual wireless telegraphy communication was established between this station and England, and dispatches were sent by the Governor-General of Canada to King Edward, the King of Italy, and the London Times. Subsequently a message was dispatched from President Roosevelt to King Edward, and it was announced that regular transmission was about to be inaugurated. Apparently the time was not yet ripe for this, and during the past four years the inventor has been devoting himself with unrelenting energy to the perfecting of his apparatus."

MARCONI AT WORK.

The story of wireless telegraphy is tabulated as follows by a scientific writer in the London Sphere:

"1842—Professor Morse sent signals across the Susquehanna River without metallic connections of any sort, by means of wires stretched along the banks.

"1859—September: James Lindsay, of Dundee, read a paper before the British Association stating that if wires were run along the coast of America and Britain and charged by batteries he could send messages from Britain to America.

"1864—December 8: Clerk Maxwell defined at the Royal Society the ether-waves to a certain extent and showed that wireless telegraphy would be possible by means of the electromagnetic waves, the velocity of which he concluded was the same as that of light, a conclusion which has subsequently been proved correct.

NIGHT VIEW OF THE WIRELESS ANTENNAE.

The effulgence here shown is not visible to the naked eye, but was caught by half an hour's exposure of the camera. The wires, we read, "gave out a curious sizzling sound like the frying of bacon."

—From the London Sphere.

"1879—Prof. D. Hughes found that a microphone in connection with the telephone produced sounds in the latter when the microphone was at a distance of several feet from coils through which a current was passing.

"1885—Sir William Preece, of the General Post-office, sent currents between two insulated squares of wire, each side measuring 440 yards, and the squares were a quarter of a mile apart.

"1886—Sir William Preece also sent signals between two parallel telegraph wires four miles apart.

"1887—Professor Hertz discovered that when a discharge was made from a Leyden jar across an air gap, sparks would also pass across a gap in a circle or square of wire held away from the jar. The discovery showed that the ether-waves streamed out from the spark gap in every direction.

"1889—Sir Oliver Lodge obtained his first successful signaling results carried out with what he termed the syntonic circuits, the coherer principle forming a part of the experiment.

"1890—November 24: The first notice of the coherer invented by Professor Branly appeared in Comptes Rendus, the coherer consisting of metal filings.

"1892—Sir William Preece established regular communication between Flatholm, an island fort in the Bristol Channel, and Lavernock on the Welsh coast, over three miles distant.

"1894—Dr. Rathenau and Professor Reubens signaled across the Wannsee at Potsdam, a distance of three miles, using a base line 550 feet long. The message was passed by means of earth currents.

"1897—Mr. Marconi sent signals from Lavernock to Flatholm and introduced the high wire or aerial.

"1898—Mr. Marconi's wireless system having been reported on favorably by Sir William Preece was established between the royal yacht, Osborne, and Osborne House.

"1899—Professor Braun took out patents in connection with wireless telegraphy. Prof. Chunder Bhowse read a paper before the Royal Society on the action of coherers.

"1901—December: "S" signals received by Mr. Marconi at Hospital Point, Newfoundland, from Cornwall.

"1902—February: The Philadelphia remained in communication with the Marconi station at Poldhu for a distance of 1,550 miles. December 21: Messages sent by Cape Breton to Poldhu, Cornwall, exchanged between King Edward and Lord Minto, Governor-General of Canada.

"1903—January 12: Messages sent between Aldershot and Channel Squadron off Portsmouth. April: Twenty-five stations erected, eight in England. August 4: International conference on wireless telegraphy opened in Berlin.

"1904—De Forest system regularly used in U. S. A. June 8: First ocean wireless newspaper published on the Campania. August 15: Wireless Telegraphy Act controlling stations in time of war.

"1905—January 1: Telegrams accepted for wireless stations by British General Post-office.

"1907—October 17: Opening of regular service for press messages to cross Atlantic from Clifden, Ireland, to Nova Scotia."

MORE MANY-HORNED SHEEP—The recent publication in these pages of an article on sheep with more than two horns elicits a letter from W. J. Clarke, associate editor of The American Sheep-Breeder (Chicago), calling our attention to the following description of the St. Kilda sheep in his recently issued book on "Modern Sheep" (Chicago, 1907). He says in this work:

"This breed of sheep is considered by some authorities to have originated in the Hebrides and Iceland. Several flocks of them are to be found in Wales. A peculiar characteristic of the breed is that the ram sometimes has two horns, sometimes four and in some instances six. Another peculiarity is that the horns seem to grow in all directions, pointing here, there, and everywhere. No two seem to grow in the same direction. The St. Kilda is a very hardy breed and is said to be free from most Copyrighted, 1906, by Pach Brothers.

DR. DARLINGTON,

Health Commissioner of New York City,

Who is so hampered by lack of inspectors that each dairy farm sending milk to the metropolis can be visited only once a year.

ills which other sheep are heir to. They have been mated with Shropshire rams with good results, the mutton being of excellent quality. The flesh of the pure bred St. Kilda is somewhat darker in color than ordinary mutton, being more like venison than the average mutton carcass. The wool is of fine texture and much in demand for the manufacture of fine underwear."

PROBLEM OF PURE MILK

EFFORTS to secure milk free from the germs of disease seem to be directed at present in two different ways—prevention and cure, or, to put it differently, endeavor to see that no germs get into the milk, and endeavor to render them harmless after they do get in. The former means regulation and control of the milk supply; the latter, some kind of treatment of the supply previous to its use. That the efficient inspection required by the first plan is impossible, and that removal of the germs by pasteurization is the only hope of those who desire pure milk, are asserted by The Medical Record (New York, October 26).

This paper quotes Health Commissioner Darlington, of New York, as saying that "the problem of a pure-milk supply for a city is solved when the Department of Health can guarantee that all milk sold within the city limits is drawn from perfectly healthy and normal cows, housed in comfortable and sanitary quarters, milked by a clean and healthy person into a sterile container, quickly cooled, transported, and delivered to the consumer in a sealed package," and then goes on to comment as follows:

"So far we are in perfect accord with the Health Commissioner, and when such perfection is reached we shall advocate the destruction or the storage of all pasteurizing apparatus. How far we are at present from such perfection, Dr. Darlington was at haste to demonstrate.

"The daily milk supply of New York, he said, amounts to 1,750,000 quarts, gathered from over 35,000 farms, and shipped from about 700 creameries located in six States. The supervision of these 35,000 farms is entrusted to sixteen inspectors, or one to something over 2,000 farms. Each of these officers inspects on an average ten farms a day, which, allowing for time in traveling between the different farms, would give him perhaps thirty minutes for each farm. If even such brief visit could be made every week, or every month, there would be some ground for confidence that the rules of the Health Department were strictly followed, and that the river of milk flowing into the city was reasonably pure.

From "Modern Sheep," copyrighted.

A ST. KILDA RAM WITH FOUR HORNS.

But each farm is visited, not every week nor every month, but only once a year. For three hundred and sixty-four days out of the three hundred and sixty-five the farmer is secure from prying eyes and an inquisitive nose, and can amuse himself, after morning prayers, with a reading of the Department's dairy rules, printed on linen and hanging on the wall of his milk-shed. The faith that would accept such inspection as a guaranty of purity in the milk supply would move Mount Everest to Central Park.

"The efforts of the Health Commissioner to secure a pure milk supply for this city are deserving of all praise, and we have no will to belittle them. He has accomplished wonders with the small force of inspectors at his command, and the refusal of the Board of Estimate to give him the money to increase this force is short-sighted and deplorable. Nevertheless, with as many inspectors as the most liberal and hygienically far-seeing board could possibly allow him, competent supervision of these 35,000 farms will be impossible.

"An army of five hundred men at least would be needed to make the inspection efficient, and even if so many intelligent and competent men could be found for the work, the expense would be such as no board of estimate would or could ever sanction. The most that can be hoped for from the most thorough inspection possible is that the milk supplied to the city shall be macroscopically clean—free, that is, from admixture of gross impurities—and containing only a few thousands of ubiquitous bacteria to the cubic centimeter. Even then there could be no certainty that the milk would be always absolutely sterile as regards the bacilli of tuberculosis, typhoid fever, and diphtheria, to say nothing of occasional accidental contamination with other pathogenic germs. With the best inspection possible under existing or any practically conceivable conditions, the great bulk of milk delivered in New York every morning will only be fit for pasteurization—and even that is as yet far from realization. . . .

"The only safety for the consumers of milk in this and other cities throughout the country lies in municipal pasteurization, conducted under constant supervision of the Health Department, of all except an insignificant fraction of the milk supply. Even that fraction would be made safer by heating for twenty minutes to 155° F. and subsequent cooling of the sealed bottles containing it to 40°. In pasteurization only, supplemented by conscientious and thorough inspection, will be found a solution of the problem."

HOW THE WORLD IS GROWING SMALLER

THAT the effect of transit facilities has been to make the world practically smaller in the past century is a statement frequently heard. How great this shrinkage has been is strikingly shown in the case of a single European country, France, by a chart that appears in the latest volume of graphical statistics published by the French Department of Public Works. We quote from a review by A. Latour, contributed to La Nature (Paris, September 28). He says, referring to the accompanying chart:

"We see that France has shrunk progressively from year to year like Balzac's wild ass's skin; the distance of a given city from Paris being represented, not according to its length in kilometers, but to the duration of the journey in hours, which is the more important. On this map the geographic contours of France, properly so-called, are for the year 1814. The lines connecting Paris to each city on the map are regarded as denoting by their length the time required at that time to reach the capital by post-chaise from these various points. Proceeding in the same way for 1834 (post-chaise) and for 1854, 1867, 1887, and 1900 (railway), and uniting by a line the points corresponding to the same epoch, we have a series of contours that have little relation to geographic truth, because of the inequality of the improvement in rapidity of travel in the various directions. For instance, the time from Paris to Marseilles was 112 hours in 1814, 80 in 1834, 38.5 in 1856, 16.2 in 1867, 13.6 in 1887, and 11.4 in 1900.

"The way in which the curve, which ought to shrink symmetrically, lengthens out along certain lines, like a splash of mud on a marble floor, shows with a somewhat cruel exactness the slowness of certain railway lines, like the Western. As a whole, France appears to have shrunk little by little to the limits of the Department of Seine-et-Oise. A chart of the same kind, represented decrease in the cost of travel, gives somewhat the same result, but the shrinking is very much less, the diminution being on the average only half between 1814 and 1900 for travelers by first class; that is 29 francs instead of 60 to Brest and 43 instead of 82 for Marseilles."—Translation made for THE LITERARY DIGEST.

HOW FRANCE HAS "SHRUNK" SINCE 1814,
Owing to the increased ease of transit.

THE PULLMAN-PORTER NUISANCE—An order forbidding Pullman-car porters to brush the clothes of passengers in the aisles of the cars has been promulgated by the Health Commissioner of Pennsylvania, Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, we are told in The Medical Record (New York, October 19). Says this paper:

"The endurance of this noxious custom for so many years is an evidence of the long-suffering patience of the American traveling public. Apart from its glaringly unhygienic features, this scattering of dust through a car and over the already sufficiently dirty and uncomfortable passengers has long been voted an unmitigated nuisance. The practise was instituted by the rapacious porters as a means of extorting dimes and quarters from their unwilling victims and has been endured simply because no one wishes to make himself conspicuous by audible protests. It is worse than useless as a means to cleanliness, for the clothes of those first brushed are as dirty as before by the time the whole carload has been curried, and what dirt has not settled back on the external parts of the travelers has filled their nostrils and lungs—not only the dust of the road, but the germ-laden accretions from the garments. . . . Other State boards of health . . . will do well to follow the example of Pennsylvania."

DR. SAMUEL G. DIXON,
Health Commissioner of Pennsylvania,
Who has launched an edict against the Pullman porter's whisk-broom.

Other State boards of health . . . will do well to follow the example of Pennsylvania."

THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

ORIENTALIZING CHRISTIANITY

THE Christian development of Asia will be along lines corresponding with the Oriental consciousness, rather than along lines predetermined by Western ecclesiastical authority. Such is the opinion of the Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall, D.D., whose view is based upon knowledge of the East gained from personal residence. This determination of the East to modify and not accept whole-heartedly whatever the West offers appears in many phases. A popular idea exists, says Dr. Hall, "that the ancient non-Christian faiths continue as they were from the beginning, resisting the changing influences of time." Such inflexibility does not exist; but, on the other hand, the ancient faiths "are in process of readjustment to new conditions, and are assimilating religious elements of Western thought, and using the product thus assimilated as a means of self-defense against Christianity." He goes on, in the New York Observer (October 21), to give an illustration of the eagerness of the Eastern world to absorb the culture of Christendom and reject its faith:

"When visiting in Hyderabad, the chairman at my lecture was a Mohammedan gentleman of high position. He had spent his life within the precincts of the remote native state of Hyderabad. Five and twenty years before he had paid one visit to England. One might suppose that a man placed in such remoteness from the centers of Western thought would have his mind filled with local ideas. On the contrary, in the course of a delightful and many-sided conversation, he broached the subject of American literature. He assured me of his peculiar admiration of Edgar Allan Poe. He then proceeded to compare Whittier and Longfellow, and to make some very discerning observations upon the points of contrast and resemblance between Emerson and Carlyle. Impressed with his wide reading, I sought a further test and suggested the name of Washington Irving. I found him perfectly familiar with all the writings of Irving, and was further astonished when he drew my attention to the stately style of Irving as suggesting the latter part of the eighteenth century rather than the nineteenth century, and as connected in his mind with the style of Oliver Goldsmith. Thus had this Mohammedan gentleman, residing in a native state, assimilated the culture of Christendom. But in his religious position his face was set as a flint against Christianity."

The manner in which that part of the East which shows itself hospitable to the Christian faith is likely to accept that faith is thus set forth:

"I speak with all honor of denominational missions in the East. Not otherwise than through these could the great work already done have been accomplished. Yet a large study of the situation shows that, in its future assimilation of Christianity, the East both consciously and unconsciously will move along lines suggested by its own temperament and preference. The development is likely to be different in different countries, for the temperament varies. If I might hazard a conjecture touching the future, I should say that the Chinese are likely to turn most naturally to ritual and a prescribed liturgy. They love organization and regularity of practice, and care less for the subjective side of religious experience. The Hindu deprecates organization and turns toward the mystical and philosophical aspects of truth. The future religious development of Japan promises to be along the line of simplicity of ritual, combined with a large interest in theological doctrine."

Dr. Hall, whose words here quoted were addressed to the students of Union Theological Seminary, sees in this character of the Eastern mind a splendid opportunity for a great theological school "built upon undenominational lines, while interested in all denominational churches." "By reason of its freedom and catholicity, it can do what the local church can not do, because of the pressure of its own local affairs, and what the denominational boards can not do, because of their very proper restriction to certain prescribed lines of action." He urges the cultivation of a spirit among students of "appreciation and love toward the world which shall result in sending forth to the East an increased number of thoroughly trained men as missionaries," equipped "on a basis of first-hand knowledge of Oriental conditions." Secondly, he urges the seminary "to send its teachers out into the non-Christian world with the large irenic message of the Christian gospel"—such a mission, for instance, as Union Seminary twice carried out in sending one of its faculty as Barrows lecturer to India and the Far East. And finally:

"Let us take the initiative in providing for the Oriental world literature that shall adequately represent the noblest and least sectarian modern interpretation of the Christian religion. I am not unmindful of the valuable service rendered by various denominational missionary presses. Their contributions to the vernacular literatures of the East have in many instances been very valuable. But at the present time, what the East most wants is not literature issued by a denominational board, but deliverances of Christian scholars, defining with clearness the essential truths of the religion of Jesus Christ."

"When in Shanghai I had a very striking interview with the distinguished missionary Timothy Richards, who told me that recently two provincial governors of China, unable to find in any existing vernacular publications a sufficiently broad and non-sectarian interpretation of the Christian religion, have deputed their own non-Christian scholars to produce manuals of the Christian religion which could be studied in the schools. Dr. Timothy Richards tells me that the manuals thus produced reflected the unfamiliarity of their authors with the actual facts of the Christian religion. Nevertheless, instances like these are significant, and I hold that the way is open for us to work directly and indirectly for the instruction of the Oriental world in the higher truths of our holy faith."

ON JUMPING PAROCHIAL FENCES

FEW people are placed in the delicate position of pastors, who, in changing their field of work, must either burn all their bridges or use great discretion in continuing past relations. The Michigan Christian Advocate (Detroit) calls attention to the problem here involved, noting that "the evils growing out of the intrusion of clergymen into other parishes for various purposes . . . seem to prevail everywhere." It confesses to have thought at times that "even farewell receptions after conferences, with gifts and adulatory speeches, would better be dispensed with, tho it is difficult to conceive how this can be done, especially in cases where the removal was not expected." Certain it is, this journal continues, "with the farewell reception all official relations should end." The problem as presented in places outside the Methodist denomination is treated in the following:

"In the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Central New York the diocesan Bishop, Charles T. Olmstead, recently served notice upon the clergymen of his Church that he expects that 'they will confine ministrations to their own parishes, unless invited to officiate elsewhere by the regularly constituted officers of the Church.' He affirms that 'complaints have reached him of the intrusion of clergymen into the parishes of others,' and denounces 'the injustice of the intrusion in the case of performing marriage ceremonies, when the intruding minister not only has the honor attached to his service, but also pockets the fee.' The Bishop declares that during the summer just passed there have been 'inexcusable breaches of the canon in this manner of a very flagrant character, and it has come to such pass that the Bishop of the diocese has determined to give notice to clergymen, both within and without the diocese, that he will take steps to have men who offend in this way brought to trial for misconduct.' He makes an appeal also to the laity 'to consider this matter and to refrain from asking clergymen to do things that will bring them into trouble.'"

In this line the New York Christian Advocate makes this observation:

"Many gross violations of the principle of comity and amity have occurred in the Methodist Episcopal Church. A minister died a few years ago who haunted all the churches of which he has been pastor. It was his habit to say to young girls something like this: 'Now, Jennie, when you are married you must remember me,' and he was continually visiting societies, baptizing the children, and marrying. At last his reputation for doing this caused him to be almost ostracized by his brethren."

GENERAL BOOTH

THE social history of the last half-century can not be written without the most conspicuous place being given to General Booth and the Salvation Army. So says The Episcopal Recorder (Philadelphia) on the occasion of the General's visit to that city in his American itinerary. That tour of America, in all human probability his last, has just been completed, and wherever the General went the press testified to the exalted worth of the man and the value of the work over which he presides. For half a century, says The Recorder, "this prophetic man has been connected, as a preacher, philanthropist, and social reformer, with the social progress of nearly every nation in the world." Further:

"Of recent years the greatness of the General's service has been recognized by kings and governments, universities and distinguished societies of all kinds, and every honor possible has been conferred upon him. The reason of this success has been the constant presentation of Christ crucified. The cross has literally done it all, and the General is never tired of impressing that fact on those who are privileged to hear him. After fifty years' experience, he has told us that there is only one Power equal to doing the work in which he has been engaged, and that is 'the regeneration of the individual by the power of God.'"

At a packed meeting in Carnegie Hall, New York, on November 4, the General made his farewell address, and told of some of the achievements of the Salvation Army. As reported by the New York Times he said regarding the work of the Army in Japan in bringing about the emancipation of girls:

"A few years ago our flag had hardly been planted there when the Salvation Army discovered that there was a law which kept poor girls, who had sold themselves into a vicious slavery for the sake of their parents, from leaving their degradation. My people went to work and agitated in the face of all persecution until the Government had passed a law emancipating thirty thousand girls."

In Germany, he asserted, the official attitude has changed from the time when the Army could not toot a cornet or clap their hands and cry hallelujah. Recently a triumphal parade was held in Berlin and the police escort were charged to guard against every mark of disrespect. The Government of Java lately offered to gather the lepers together and pay for their support, if the Salvation Army would take charge of the work. Continuing the General said:

"Forty-two years ago I stood alone. All the colonels and the captains now fighting for salvation were under one hat, and I had the privilege of wearing it. I had no organization to raise funds, yet the Salvation Army stands out to-day a powerful organization. The Salvation Army not only conquers a country, but it keeps the country it has won against enemies, whether from her or from hell.

"I think no church outside of the Roman Catholic appeals in so many languages. There are 15,000 officers and 50,000 men and women local officers who earn their own living. There are 60 or 70 publications. There are 25 newspapers in 17 tongues. And we have 20,000 bandmen, nearly every one of whom has been converted by us. It is a mistake which many have made to suppose that our bandmen are paid.

"I know there has been some criticism of their playing, yet a Mr. Bernard Shaw, who, unknown to us, visited some of our musical festivals, has reported that several of our bands stand at the top of organizations playing religious music. Sousa is not in it. You never need worry about not getting your money's worth out of the Salvation-Army band. If not in quality, you get it in quantity."

GENERAL BOOTH,

In the robes of his recently acquired Oxford degree. For half a century "this prophetic man has been connected, as a preacher, philanthropist, and social reformer, with the social progress of nearly every nation in the world."

WHO WILL GET THE CARDINALS?

THE American Catholics are looking eagerly forward to the appointment of a new cardinal there is doubt expressed that the Papal Consistory held this month will add a new American member of the Sacred College. Two difficulties are said to beset the Pope in the selection of an American cardinal—that of "choice and the 'modern' reputation of the American clergy." Among the possible candidates Archbishop Farley is reported to stand highest on the list, being at the head of the New York diocese, "the most important in America." But the East already has its cardinal, and the West, whose leading prelate is Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, will look for representation. Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, "is held in great confidence" in Rome "through his learning and quiet power." A dispatch from Rome to the New York Times (November 2) discusses in these words the general question of representation both American and foreign, and the uncertain element that enters into the papal decision:

"If the number of cardinals were in proportion to the number of Catholics, the United States ought to have, not one, but several cardinals. Since the days of Sixtus V. the number of members of the Sacred College has been limited to seventy, altho there are rarely more than sixty at one time, and as the United States is the fourth Catholic power in the world in regard to the number of communicants, she ought to have eight cardinals. She, indeed, has only one, while little Spain at the present moment has six.

"However, there are, of course, many considerations besides population, and several Catholic countries have an old-established right to a certain number of cardinals. The 'plenum' has never purposely been reached since 1753, it being considered better to have one or two vacancies for emergencies. The vacant number is now twelve, the ranks of the college having recently been thinned by deaths. Notwithstanding this fact, the appointments of the present Pontiff have been few, altho Cardinal Rinaldine will shortly receive the red hat—but he is a creation of the last consistory. England will also be disappointed at the coming consistory, altho she has always been accustomed to have a cardinal in the Archdiocese of Westminster, while Canada must give up the hope of having another to replace Cardinal Taschereau.

"Now, as to the accusation of being too 'modern,' the American Catholic clergy, while always showing themselves abreast of the times, are among the most loyal children the Holy See has, but Pius X. wants something more than loyalty. He wants submission—an outsider would almost say blind obedience—and, with the old bugbear of Americanism in mind he will not increase the power of the clergy in your country by giving them another cardinal unless—and this is written on the cards—he suddenly changes his mind and springs a small bomb, as he did in the matter of the Bologna Archbishopric."

THE CHURCH'S PART IN THE "ETHICAL REVIVAL"

THE larger share of credit for the "ethical revival" of the past three years has gone to the popular magazines. The church has frequently been described as a passive observer; but her share is none the less an active one, as we see pointed out by the Rev. Paul Weyand. "Who have been the makers and movers of this renaissance of common honesty?" he asks. "In what mold and under what ideals were these men formed who have stood out and battled for the right, often against big odds, and who have staked popularity or place to win or lose? In the city," which is "the battle-ground to-day of morality and order and ideals," declares Mr. Weyand in the Pittsburg Christian Advocate, "strikingly characteristic work has been done by churchmen." Thus:

"In New York there is Seth Low, the Episcopalian; in Philadelphia John Weaver, the Baptist Sunday-school teacher; in Jersey City Mark Fagan, the Roman Catholic; in Pittsburg George W. Guthrie, the Episcopalian; and in Toledo Brand Whitlock, the Methodist.

"In addition to these men who have stood as executives of the better municipal life, no one person in America has done more as a developer of sentiment for municipal toning up than has Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, the virile pastor of Madison Square Presbyterian Church, of New York. Bishop Henry C. Potter's indictment of the vice conditions under the Tammany régime was a classic in style and a cyclone in effect. Dr. Lyman Abbott's pen gives no uncertain expression on the pages of The Outlook on things moral in city and State. So likewise Dr. William Hayes Ward, of The Independent. Dr. Josiah Strong is the noted author of 'The Twentieth Century City.' Dr. Washington Gladden, the Congregational clergyman of Columbus, has made valuable contributions to the literature of civic and national and social life. Towering above all these men in inspiration, intensity, action, and persistence stands the figure of Theodore Roosevelt, for years a member of the Dutch Reformed Church, preaching lay sermons from its pulpit, making addresses to Bible societies which are sent broadcast by them all over the world as tracts, perfectly at home before Young Men's Christian and kindred societies, proud of his membership in the church of Christ, preaching by word and example the simple righteousness of the Old and the New Testament. More than any other public man, he is the genius of the present moral revival.

"His successor in case of his death, C. W. Fairbanks, likewise is a Christian man, and actively identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church. But lately of the Cabinet was Leslie M. Shaw, of the same denomination. The appointment of Charles J. Bonaparte, a well-known Roman Catholic, was a distinct recognition of decency and cleanness before coming into the Cabinet as Secretary of the Navy. Secretary of War Taft was a noted Young Men's Christian Association man at Yale, and led the prayer-meetings. Bristow, the relentless prober in the Post-office Department, is a Methodist. Justice Brewer, of the Supreme Court, frequently by voice and pen directs the public to a right consideration of public subjects from a moral standpoint. He is a missionary's son.

"In the Senate, conspicuous examples of churchmen whose votes can be counted upon the right side of all public questions from the moral standpoint are Dolliver, of Iowa, and Beveridge, of Indiana. The acknowledged leader of the Democracy, William J. Bryan, frequently goes into the pulpit upon invitation, and talks to his fellow men of the great truths of Jesus Christ. Miss Ida M. Tarbell, whose pen has had an incalculable influence in directing attention to a better alinement in corporate life, has been identified for years with one of the larger Christian bodies."

SUNDAY AMUSEMENTS IN NEW YORK

THE law prohibiting theatrical performances of the New York theaters on Sunday has been a storm-center for a long time. As it is understood at present, its enforcement has been apparently an impossibility. There seems to be doubt as to what the law exactly does require, and until this is settled by a Supreme-Court decision definite action, it is alleged, can scarcely be taken. A definite stage in the effort to correct the evil, however, has been reached in the letter address to Mayor McClellan and Police Commissioner Bingham by Governor Hughes, calling attention to the violations of law and requesting that the law be enforced. His action has been inspired by letters received by him from President Harris of the State Federation of Labor, and from Francis John Moran, chairman of the National Law Committee of the Actors' Church Alliance. The latter informed the Governor that on a recent Sunday evening there were twenty-eight theaters and some sixteen resorts or concert halls open in New York, besides the one-cent shows. His protest was made in behalf of the actors and actresses; who, obliged to play seven days a week, have no rest whatever, and in his letter to the Governor he also recites the obstacles that have presented themselves in the way of any effort at enforcement of the law. He said:

"Since General Bingham has been Commissioner of Police most honest endeavors have been made by him to secure conviction so as to get the question settled as to what the law means may be done or not done on Sunday. I have been present at the hearings when most clear and positive evidence has been given by the police in the various cases.

"The magistrates have accepted any idle excuse or illusive promise given by managers or proprietors as to why this or that act was done. Indeed, the Commissioner says that the effect has been very demoralizing on his men, when they have done their best, to have their testimony turned down and themselves brought into contempt of the managers."

The Christian Advocate (New York) believes that "many of the decisions of some magistrates, compared with the evidence on which they profess to act, would be found to be a travesty of justice." In Brooklyn the situation is not so bad; Mr. Moran reporting that "through the energetic exertions of the Rev. Canon S. Chase nine convictions have been obtained and all the theaters have been closed but four." The Christian Advocate continues:

"Some of the men who run vaudeville places on Sunday have the effrontery to argue, in behalf of their law-breaking and their shows, that they 'draw young men from the streets and from the saloons.' So if all the trades were to go to work on Sunday and were not interfered with by law, they would draw the young men from the streets and saloons, but the final effects would be in all respects degrading, as well as destructive to health. There are some things worse than saloons that draw men off the streets and away from saloons."

The Churchman (New York) observes that "Canon Chase and the Actors' Church Alliance are to be congratulated on their success in forcing this question to a definite issue and putting responsibility squarely where it belongs." It points out one mitigating difficulty:

"The construction of the law is not altogether clear. While some of these Sunday performances have been as objectionable as any that are tolerated on other days of the week, some, which apparently fall equally under the condemnation of the law, are of a character which on any other day would be universally approved as ministering not only to innocent recreation, but to popular culture."

Mayor McClellan has assured the Governor that as soon as the exact requirements of the law can be determined in test cases now approaching decision in the Supreme Court, "the Police Department shall see that its provisions are strictly enforced in all the theaters and places of public amusement in the city, and such proceedings will be taken as may be necessary to compel the compliance with the provisions of the law as so determined."

LETTERS AND ART

PADEREWSKI AND THE YOUNGSTERS

DOES Paderewski ever think of himself as an incarnation of Ibsen's Master Builder, and shudder when he hears the younger generation come knocking at his door? That younger generation would seem determined this season to force the issue, for besides the master pianist we are to have with us Hofmann, Bauer, Hambourg, Schelling, Buhlig, and de Pachmann. The last-named may be content to rest in the fame he possesses, but the others are yet too young to say openly what place they aspire to. "Formerly, when Paderewski was in the field," observes the New York Evening Post, "most other pianists maintained a discreet silence; this year they all come rushing in together." It is also not overlooked that the younger generation are reenforced by such women players as Katherine Goodson, Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler, Augusta Cottlow, and Olga Samaroff. So far this season New York has heard Paderewski, Hofmann, and Hambourg. The last-named has not shown himself formidable in rivalry, but the first recital of Hofmann led Mr. Finck in The Evening Post to remark:

"Great is the number of pianists we are to hear this season, but whether any one—Paderewski, of course, excepted—will reach and maintain the high level of Josef Hofmann's recital is very doubtful."

Paderewski, by all testimony, is still supreme, and, according to Mr. Krehbiel in The Tribune (New York), in no immediate need of trepidation over the knocking of the younger generation. We read:

"The season has only opened and we are in a whirl of pianoforte concerts. Mr. Hofmann has disclosed to us the cool, calculating virtuoso, whose horizon seemed (at his first recital) to be bounded by the printed page and the instrument upon which he played. Mr. Hambourg has bethumped and bethwacked the pianoforte, and with its steely sinews has seamed the faces of Beethoven and Brahms with bloody stripes. Now comes Mr. Paderewski. Who shall inquire with new curiosity how he played? He has been heard again and again; yet there is no loss of interest in his playing, for here it is not the virtuoso, not the instrument, nor alone the composer's music that exerts the charm. It is the marvelous and indescribable blending of all the elements implied in the words—the perfection of technical execution which must, nowadays, belong to the virtuoso; the tonal charm which wondrous gifts can evoke out of the jangling wire and vibrating wood of the pianoforte; logicalness and emotionality and sensuous beauty in the music itself. Mr. Paderewski has grieved many of his old admirers of late by exhibiting a desire to play in what may be called the orchestral style—to forget that the voice of a pianoforte is not apocalyptic, nor that of many waters and mighty thunders, but even in his excesses he carries the fancy captive and stirs the depths of the imagination. And when he asks the pianoforte to sing it is a chorus of ecstatic hallelujahs and harping symphonies. So yesterday. Admiration has been express in these columns for his splendid variations—kaleidoscopic, in color and outlines, rich in display of tonal devices, but loveliest in their sweet and strong artistic sanity."

The grief that Mr. Krehbiel alludes to as being felt by Paderewski's admirers over his tendency to get orchestral instead of song effects from the piano is further express by Mr. Parker in the Boston Transcript. Thus:

"It is unnecessary now to descant upon the changes in Paderewski's playing that his visit to America in 1902 began to disclose—especially in that memorable recital in New York on the day after the comparative failure of 'Manru' at the Metropolitan—and that his tour of 1905 fully revealed. Some lament them and refuse to be comforted. They declare that the Paderewski who once loved and cared the piano now bears it ill-will and wreaks his anger upon it. Theirs was; theirs, they insist, shall be, the Paderewski who wove iridescent visions in gossamer tones; who caught and whispered in his turn the softest whispers of romance and fantasy; who distilled the pure essence of poetry into transparent instrumental song; who touched almost all the music that he played with an enticing fineness of spirit. To hear him was to look upon a magic web of magic sights. And now in his stead is a Paderewski who has forsworn iridescence; who cries instead of whispers; who will have none of half-lights and delicately magical tonal tracery. Now he commands his instrument and his hearers.

Copyrighted by Davis & Sanford, New York.

THE PADEREWSKI OF TO-DAY.

Age has whitened his luxuriant locks, but still, "when he asks the pianoforte to sing, it is a chorus of ecstatic hallelujahs and harping symphonies."

He bids it thunder with a mighty and sweeping eloquence; it must proclaim joys, sorrows, whatever emotions rise in him to the call of the music at their fullest; it is the voice of passion and power where once it was the voice of dreams and contemplation; the half-tints have yielded to the hottest of colors and the darkest of shadows. Into his playing in the earlier days went contemplation and introspection; through it now power and passion devour their way to expression. Always Paderewski's playing has expressed himself as well as the music; he has dominated his music as he has dominated his audience. Ten years ago it expressed one self. Now it must perforce express another that has succeeded. It is not caprice or deliberation that has changed his playing; irresistible goading from within has wrought the transformation—perhaps even in a measure unconsciously to the pianist himself. He can set himself back not one whit more than can the rest of us. In his secret heart, he may, even as do most sensitive men, deplore a vanished past."

After reading Mr. Henderson in The Sun (New York) one is tempted to ask, Has the old Paderewski come again in Mr. Hofmann? Mr. Henderson says of the younger man:

"The technical dexterity and dynamic range which he had of old are still with him, of course, but he has lost all hardness of finger and wrist and has mellowed and deepened his original feeling for rhythmic line and melodic curve. He was always a searcher after symmetry of phrase and the light and shade of infinite varieties of finger accent and the elusive rubato; but of the floating, upborne breath of the vital legato he never was master till now. No pianist living can evoke from his instrument a more beautiful singing tone than Hofmann brought forth yesterday afternoon, and this cantilena was preserved throughout every work, in melodic utterance of every character, in solemn procession of chords, in filmy weavings of scales and trills, and in all the more scintillant exfoliations of fancy, which are too often treated as mere passage work."

"SUBMERGED RENOWN"

IF the phrase "submerged renown" had been furnished us earlier it might have covered the case of the late Mary J. Holmes, whose wide popularity was recently considered in these pages. The phrase was struck out by Stevenson and Mark Twain during a conversation the pair held while sitting on a bench in Washington Square, New York. "Submerged fame," "submerged reputation" were variants the two discuss, but they finally decided that the fact was best covered by the one given above, "submerged renown." The phrase once accepted was fitted to one Davis, whom Stevenson had discovered to be "the American author whose fame and acceptance" stretched widest in the United States. Says Mark Twain in a section of his autobiography printed in the The Sunday Magazine (New York, November 3):

"While in a bookshop or bookstall [in Albany] he had noticed a long rank of small books, cheaply but neatly gotten up, and bearing such titles as 'Davis's Selected Speeches,' 'Davis's Selected Poetry,' Davis's this and Davis's that, and Davis's the other thing; compilations, every one of them, each with a brief, compact, intelligent, and useful introductory chapter by this same Davis, whose first name I have forgotten."

Mark Twain confesses that when put to the question he thought he could name the man of widest fame, but modesty forbade him to speak. Stevenson noticed and said:

"Save your delicacy for another time—you are not the one. For a shilling you can't name the American author of widest note and popularity in the States. But I can."

"Then he went on and told about that Albany incident. He had inquired of the shopman, 'Who is this Davis?'"

"The answer was, 'An author whose books have to have freight-trains to carry them, not baskets. Apparently you have not heard of him?'"

"Stevenson said no, this was the first time. The man said:

"'Nobody has heard of Davis; you may ask all around and you will see. You never see his name mentioned in print, not even in

Copyrighted by Aime Dupont

VLADIMIR DE PACHMANN,

The greatest interpreter of Chopin among piano virtuosos.

advertisement; these things are of no use to Davis, not any more than they are to the winds and the sea. You never see one of Davis's books floating on top of the United States; but put on your diving armor and get yourself lowered away down and down and down till you strike the dense region, the sunless region of eternal drudgery and starvation wages—there you'll find them by the million. The man that gets that market, his fortune is made, his bread and butter are safe, for those people will never go back on him. An author may have a reputation which is confined to the surface, and lose it and become pitied, then despised, then forgotten, entirely forgotten—the frequent steps in a surface reputation. A surface reputation, however great, is always mortal, and always killable if you go at it right—with pins and needles, and quiet slow poison, not with the club and tomahawk. But it is a different matter with the submerged reputation—down in the deep water; once a favorite there, always a favorite; once beloved, always beloved; once respected, always respected, honored, and believed in. For, what the reviewer says never finds its way down into those placid deeps; nor the newspaper sneers, nor any breath of the winds of slander blowing above. Down there they never hear of these things. Their idol may be painted clay up there at the surface, and fade and waste and crumble and blow away, there being much weather there; but down below he is gold and adamant and indestructible."

JOYS OF AN EDITOR

IF all editors are like the one who is self-confest in Mr. Howells's "Recollections," new writers need not complain that the "old guard" are leagued against them. Neither need they resort to devious ways to get the editor's welcoming approval. Mr. Howells, in writing of the days when he edited The Atlantic, tells how "the acceptable manuscript, especially from an unknown hand, brought a glow of joy which richly compensated me for all I suffered from the others." "To feel the touch never felt before, to be the first to find the planet unimagined in the illimitable heaven of art, to be in at the dawn of a new talent, with the light that seems to mantle the written page," he exclaims ecstatically, "who would not be an editor for such a privilege?" The new talent that tried to disguise its sex, he goes on to say, "never deceived the editor, even when it deceived the reader." Yet Mr.

Copyrighted by Genford, New York.

MARK HAMBOURG.

JOSEF HOFMANN.

FANNIE BLOOMFIELD-ZEISLER.

HAROLD BAUER.

SOME YOUNGER PIANISTS WHO HOPE TO DISPUTE THE PALM WITH PADEREWSKI.

Photograph by Elliott & Fry, London.
JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

Copyrighted by Alice Boughton.
THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH.

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS.

WALTER H. PAGE.

FOUR OF THE NOTABLE EX-EDITORS OF "THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY."

Howells is obliged to confess one notable exception; and that was "the very signal and very noted instance of Miss Mary N. Murfree, whom, till I met her face to face, I never suspected for any but Charles Egbert Craddock." Mr. Howells continues:

"The severely simple, the robust, the athletic, hand which she wrote would have sufficed to carry conviction of her manhood against any doubt. But I had no doubts. I believe I took the first story she sent, and for three or four years I address my letters of acceptance, or criticism, to Charles Egbert Craddock, Murfreesboro', Tenn., without the slightest misgiving. Then she came to Boston, and Aldrich, who had succeeded me, and who had already suffered the disillusion awaiting me, asked me to meet Craddock at dinner. He had asked Dr. Holmes and Lawrence Barrett, too; and I should not attempt to say whose astonishment he enjoyed most. But I wish I could recall word for word the exquisite terms in which Dr. Holmes turned his discomfiture into triumph in that most delicately feminine presence.

"The proof of identity, if any were needed, came with the rich, full pipe of a voice in which she answered our words and gasps of amaze. In literary history I fancy there has been no such perfect masquerade; but masquerade was the least part of Miss Murfree's success. There seems in the dust and smoke of the recent literary explosions an eclipse of that fine talent, as strong as it is fine, and as native as it is rare; but I hope that when the vaporous reputations blow away, her clear light will show the stronger for its momentary obscuration. She was the first to express a true Southern quality in fiction, and it was not the less Southern because it rendered the strange, rude, wild life of a small section of the greater section which still unhappily remains a section. One might have said, looking back from the acknowledged fact of her personality, that a woman of the Rosa Bonheur type could well have caught the look of that half-savagery in her men; but that only a man could have touched in the wilding, flower-like, pathetic loveliness of the sort of heroine she gave to art."

Mr. Howells and his predecessors in the editorial chair, we are told, were accused of harboring a superstition "that The Atlantic was unfriendly to all literature outside of Boston or New England, or, at farthest, New York or Philadelphia." This appears to the present writer to be the time to disclaim the existence of any such superstition, now that the November number of The Atlantic celebrates its semicentennial. The belief as a superstition gave the editors some trouble in the endeavor to "enlighten" the magazine's critics. "The fact was that there was elsewhere little writing worth printing in it," observes the writer, "but that little was cordially welcomed." The fortunate "outlanders" were to a large extent exponents of that tempered realism which became a note of The Atlantic, and Mr. Howells acknowledges sharing with Lowell and Fields their "passion for the common, for 'the familiar and low.'" But some of these studies of an earlier time, Mr. Howells thinks, "would only come to trouble joy in the younger" readers, who "delight in the human-nature fakers of our latter-day fiction." Of the most noteworthy we read:

"Even in the sixth year of the magazine, Bret Harte, of California, had appeared in it; and others of the San-Francisco school, notably Charles Warren Stoddard, had won an easy entrance after him. Where, indeed, would Mr. Stoddard have been denied, if he had come with something so utterly fresh and delicious as 'A Prodigal in Tahiti'? Branches he bore of that and many another enchanted stem, which won his literature my love, and keeps it to this day, so that a tender indignation rises in my heart when I find it is not known to every one. John Hay, so great in such different kinds, came also with verse and fiction, studies of the West, and studies of the lingering East in Spain as he had found it in his 'Castilian Days.' Later came Mark Twain, originally of Missouri, but then provisionally of Hartford, and now ultimately of the Solar System, not to say the Universe. He came first with 'A True Story,' one of those noble pieces of humanity with which the South has atoned chiefly if not solely through him for all its despite to the negro. Then he came with other things, but preeminently with 'Old Times on the Mississippi,' which I hope I am not too fondly mistaken in thinking I suggested his writing for the magazine. 'A True Story' was but three pages long, and I remember the anxiety with which the business side of the magazine tried to compute its pecuniary value. It was finally decided to give the author twenty dollars a page, a rate unexampled in our modest history. I believe Mr. Clemens has since been offered a thousand dollars a thousand words, but I have never regretted that we paid him so handsomely for his first contribution."

JEOPARDY OF THE NEW YORK STAGE

PEOPLE who are looking about to find why, aside from the absolute failures, the theatrical season is so dull are not encouraged by Mr. Daniel Frohman, who sees the drama in New York to be "in a position of absolute jeopardy." In a letter to the New York World he declares that this condition is brought about by the multiplication of theaters and the small number of "writers of intellectual and technical equipment to compete with the many theaters that are constantly needing material for entertainment." The country at large also demands the best, and consequently draws off the leading players for a part of the year. The necessity of meeting the claims of outsiders, he says, "has gradually had the effect of diluting both the drama and its performance, and, consequently, of lowering the standard of the stage as an institution." He continues:

"Conditions in the theaters have never changed and never will change. They are the same to-day that they were when the drama began. We are now affected with the same emotions that life has always held; and the stage, after all is said and done, is only a mirror that reflects life. Taste in plays and costumes may change, but life remains conventional.

"Whatever may be its form, any play will have a sufficient audience if it deals with subjects of universal interest. The American public will always patronize what is good of its kind, whether it be tragedy, comedy, romantically poetic drama, or farce. The successful manager must be allied by sympathy and predilection to the tastes of a universal public; to go against this taste is to try to force water up-stream.

DANIEL FROHMAN,

Who declares that "there can be no durability, stability, or future for plays which reflect what is contemptible, sordid, or degrading in life."

"There can be no durability, stability, or future for plays which reflect what is contemptible, sordid, or degrading in life, or which depend for their value purely on depicting such elements.

"My personal ideal of the drama is that plays should reflect life, not in its sordid and degrading details, but in those inspiring, universal truths which exalt the mind. The Ibsen drama, for instance, is a purely exotic condition and interesting only as a clinic of the morbid emotions. I regard it as merely a tentative form of drama, because it represents only the gropings and experiments of modern philosophers. They are prowling around the bulwarks of what is conventional.

"Such plays are seldom produced by theatrical managers of experience, but by actors who see in them opportunities for 'acting' in the narrow, professional sense. Even now a reaction is setting in against the Ibsen drama and the so-called school of playwrighting it has created in Continental Europe, its birthplace.

"Literalness on the stage can never conform to the established idea of what is dramatic art. The general public—I except a limited number of cranks—do not want it in the theater. If they did, Arnold Daly, with all his ambitions, would be not only a prophet, but a financier. He must surely fail in pursuit of his mistaken idea."

Mr. Winter of The Tribune (New York), in a reply to Mr. Frohman's letter, takes exception to the statement that "the successful manager must be allied by sympathy and predilection to the tastes of a universal public." He declares in The Tribune:

"The public taste is not formulated and it can not be prejudged. Edwin Booth never deferred to any assumed standard of popular taste; yet he made at least three fortunes, and he died worth about half a million dollars—if money is to be the test of success. Henry Irving never deferred to any theory of popular taste; yet he earned fortune after fortune, and he held the destiny of the British stage, if not that of the whole English-speaking stage, in the hollow of his hand, for many years. To be 'allied by sympathy and predilection to a universal public taste' is to be allied to some very low, very vulgar, very carnal predilections. It is the province of the intellect to lead, not to follow; not to give to any portion of the public what it might be assumed to want, but to lead every part of the public to want what it ought to have. Accomplishment of that purpose is what makes a theatrical producer a manager, and not merely a janitor. The effort to accomplish that result has wrecked fortunes and broken hearts before now, and doubtless it will again. But the accomplishment of it is a noble service to society, and it places and maintains the great art of acting on the highest level. Eternal vigilance, eternal labor, and the courage to endure defeat and loss—that is the price of its accomplishment. But it can be accomplished. It was that achievement which made Henry Irving not only a marvelous actor, but the manager of intellectual society wherever he went."

THE THORNY PATH OF REALISM

THE path of the realist in literature is not one of roses. When he attempts an honest analysis of human things he is met by a formidable dilemma: "If, for artistic reasons, he restricts his choice of persons and passions, or subdues his treatment of them, he is told, and wisely told, that his picture is conventional and untrue to life. But if he boldly enters terra damnata, and faithfully reproduces the details, he is told that altho his picture may be true to life, it is too unpleasant, and would he kindly remove it?" In these words Mr. William Romaine Paterson presents the situation created by the controversy in England over the "fleshly" state of her current fiction. It is his belief that "there never was an age in which the realistic method was so justified," but the novelist who elects the method is sure to be treated to all kinds of inconsistent rebukes. Mr. Paterson is particularly incensed over a protest against what is called "the degradation of the modern novel," signed by "A Man of Letters" and published in The Bookman (London, October). This writer urges us to "put aside all fantastic and disordered imagination, tho boasting itself to be realism," and begs us to return to the "true classics." Mr. Paterson, writing in The Daily Chronicle (London), recalls to the "Man of Letters" some of the things he would find there. Thus:

"If 'A Man of Letters,' equipped with this critical apparatus, had been a contemporary of Æschylus and Sophocles, is it certain that he would not have rejected with horror the terrible subjects which those great men turned into plays? Could he have endured the situation created by Phædra in the 'Hippolytus' of Euripides? That situation was recently reproduced in a London suburb, and we heard all about it in the divorce court. But if a modern novelist attempted to handle it, 'A Man of Letters' would probably cry, 'Fie! fie!'

"But it does seem as if all the novels and dramas, discreet and indiscreet, form nothing except the annals of Aphrodite. The climax, for instance, of the greatest poem of the modern era—Goethe's 'Faust'—is meaningless unless we know that at some point in the middle of the play innocence was transformed into guilt. I confess, indeed, that this recurring decimal frequently bores me. I grow weary of the eternal permutations and combinations of lovers, and I have ceased to read Boccaccio. But the fact remains that it is Love more as devil than as angel who holds the key of most of the great dramatic situations. 'A Man of Letters' bids novelists be guided by the ideal love, 'the star of Dante which leads up to highest heaven.' But it is really no longer possible to tolerate this nonsense which is talked about Dante and Beatrice.

"Disguise it as we may, the truth remains that Dante spent his most ardent years loving another man's wife. One wonders what Messer Simone dei Bardi would think of the great tenderness which all kinds of sentimental writers have displayed for Dante's obsession? Any one who has read 'Vita Nuova' knows that Dante was a man of gigantic passion, and that in his case, as in the cases of Byron and of Burns, it was love both balked and satisfied which gave the real motive power. In 'Purgatorio' there are passages in which Dante, with a somewhat strange humility, causes Beatrice to chide him for having succumbed to a certain frailty. And as for 'fantastic and disordered imagination,' 'A Man of Letters' knows that the most astonishing instances are to be found in the work of the poet who made hell—and such a hell!—the foundation of his work."

Mr. Paterson asserts that no "realist of to-day" of whom he has knowledge is "capable of creating such a menagerie." And he goes on:

"So much for the classics. Dante, like another great realist, knew that 'the true physician walks the foulest ward.' But we must leave 'A Man of Letters' to sail away in his air-ship with the novels of Walter Scott. The war will go on in Mansoul. But unless it is to be a sham fight the flesh must be allowed its combat with the spirit. John Bunyan knew all about it, and he was not afraid of speaking out. Realism and pathology? No great literature is without them. And how can it be otherwise if literature honestly interprets a world like ours?"

FREDERICK V. HOLMAN.

OLIVE THORNE MILLER.

ROBERT N. STEPHENS.

ANNE WARNER.

CHRISTINA G. WHYTE.

A GUIDE TO THE NEW BOOKS

Bagot, Richard. The Lakes of Northern Italy. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. xii-308. New York: The Macmillan Co. $1.75 net.

Baille-Grohman, W. A. The Land in the Mountains. Being an account of the past and present of Tyrol, its people and its castles. Illustrated. 8vo, pp. xx-279. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Co.

Beale, Harriet S. Blaine. Stories from the Old Testament for Children. Illustrated. 8vo, pp. 409. New York: Duffield & Co. $2 net.

Beer, George Louis. The British Colonial Policy 1754-1765. 8vo, pp. ix-327. New York: The Macmillan Co. $2 net.

Bennett, Ella G. Abelard and Heloise. (The Love Letters: A Poetical Rendering.) Frontispiece. 12mo, pp. iii-36. New York: Paul Elder & Co.

Bensusan, S. L. Velazquez. Illustrated with Eight Reproductions in Colour. 12mo, pp. 77; Reynolds. Illustrated with Eight Reproductions in Colour. 12mo, pp. 80. New York: Frederick A. Stokes Co. 65 cents each.

Brewster, William T. [Chosen and Edited with an Introduction and Notes by.] Specimens of Modern English Literary Criticism. 12mo, pp. xxxiii-379. New York: The Macmillan Co. $1 net.

Brooks, Amy. Randy's Prince. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 244. Boston: Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co. $1 net.

Brown, Helen Dawes. Mr. Tuckerman's Nieces. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 266. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.50 net.

Browning, Elizabeth Barrett. Lady Geraldine's Courtship. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 107. New York: D. Appleton Co.

Bryant, Sara Cone. Stories to Tell to Children. 12mo, pp. xlvii-243. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1 net.

Church, Rev. Alfred J., M.A. The Iliad for Boys and Girls. Told from Homer in Simple Language. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 302. New York: The Macmillan Co. $1.50 net.

Compayré, Gabriel. Herbert Spencer and Scientific Education. Frontispiece. 12mo, pp. ix-119; Herbert and Education by Instruction. Frontispiece. 12mo, pp. x-141; Horace Mann and the Public School in the United States. Frontispiece. 12mo, pp. vi-134; Jean Jacques Rousseau and Education from Nature. Frontispiece. 12mo, pp. vi-120; Pestalozzi and Elementary Education. Frontispiece. 12mo, pp. xi-139. New York: Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. 90 cents net each.

Cutting, Mary Stewart. The Suburban Whirl. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 202. New York: The McClure Co.

Durland, Kellogg. The True Story of an Adventurous Year in Russia. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. xxv-494. New York: The Century Co.

Friedman, I. K. The Radical. Frontispiece. 12mo, pp. vii-362. New York: D. Appleton & Co. $1.50 net.

Fynn, A. F., Ph.D. The American Indian as a Product of Environment. With Special Reference to the Pueblos. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 275. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. $1.50 net.

Gallon, Tom. The Cruise of the Make-Believes. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 322. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. $1.50 net.

Hadden, J. Cuthbert. The Great Operas. Tannhäuser—Wagner. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 46; The Bohemian Girl—Balfé. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 31. New York: Frederick A. Stokes Co. 50 cents each.

Harriman, Karl Edwin. Sadie. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. ix-309. New York: D. Appleton & Co. $1.50 net.

Harris, Miriam Coles. The Tents of Wickedness. 12mo, pp. 474. New York: D. Appleton & Co. $1.50.

If this book were not marred by one or two unnecessary bits of artificial coarseness, one would be tempted to say that after skimming through a dozen linotype historical romances, here at last is a novel to sit down and read. Its five parts will hardly encourage the skimmer, and at times, as in the case of Ford's "The Honorable Peter Stirling," the interest drags, but as in that case also one's interest is renewed, and one is led on imperceptibly to the conclusion.

A new novel by this descendant of Governor Winthrop's company is something of a surprise, as she has not published a work of fiction in many years. Her first novel, "Rutledge" (1860), has of course remained very popular. Born on Long Island, and always resident there or in New York, she has had full opportunity to observe the ways of our "champagne aristocracy," which are set forth in her book with a directness that is sometimes startling. It deals with the career and romance of Leonora Hungerford, who comes from a convent school in France to preside over the household of her father, a widower and clubman. It contains many keen epigrams.

Hill, Frederick Trevor. Decisive Battles of the Law. Narrative Studies of Eight Legal Contests Affecting the History of the United States between the years 1800 and 1886. Frontispiece. 12mo, pp. viii-167. New York: Harper & Brothers. $2.25 net.

Holbach, Maude M. Dalmatia. The Land Where East Meets West. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. xiii-236. New York: John Lane Co. $1.50 net.

Holland, Clive. Things Seen in Egypt. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. xvi-255. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co.

Holman, Frederick V. Dr. John McLoughlin, the Father of Oregon. Frontispiece. 8vo, pp. 301. Cleveland: The Arthur H. Clark Co. $2.50 net.

This tribute to the memory of one of the chief upbuilders of the Northwest has been published on the fiftieth anniversary of Dr. McLoughlin's death. The author, Mr. Holman, is the grandson of John Holman, a participant in the first great emigration from Independence, Mo., to Fort Vancouver in 1843. The emigrants found there in supreme control of the coast Dr. John McLoughlin, chief factor of the Hudson's Bay Company. He was born in Parish La Rivière du Loup, Canada, on the St. Lawrence River, in 1784. He was educated in Canada and Scotland and, joining the Northwest Company, a rival of the Hudson's Bay Company, was, in 1821, in charge of the former's depot at Fort William, Lake Superior. After the coalition of the two companies in that year, he was engaged as chief factor to manage and to build up the company's business in the Oregon Country, arriving at Fort George on the Columbia River in 1824. The following year he constructed Fort Vancouver, farther up the river, where he remained in charge until 1846.

From 1818 to 1846 the Oregon Country, extending to Alaska, was, by a convention made in the former year, under the joint occupancy of the United States and Great Britain. In the latter year the present boundary of the two countries was fixed by treaty. During all this period Dr. McLoughlin, a man of almost gigantic stature, and of patriarchal aspect, maintained order throughout the wild region within his domain. His rule was practically feudal, and he lived in great state, extending courtesy and hospitality to travelers and even to rival traders. As the representative of the Hudson's Bay Company, it was his duty to maintain its monopoly and to prevent the Oregon Country from being settled by Americans to the prejudice of Great Britain's claim. In this he was effectual until the great inrush of American pioneers in 1843-46. He then found himself in the position of choosing between rendering assistance to the needy arrivals, or allowing them to starve or be slaughtered by the Indians. He took the better part, thus gaining the ill-will of his superiors, and mechanically bringing about permanent American occupation. His last years were clouded by unjust accusations of cruelty and by an effort to sequester the remnant of his personal land holdings. These matters were righted, however, by documentary proof and by legislative action, and he will always be held in loving memory as the "Father of Oregon."

Keays, H. A. Mitchell. The Road to Damascus. 12mo, pp. 447. Boston: Small, Maynard & Co. $1.50 net.

Kingsley, Florence Morse. Those Queer Browns. Frontispiece. 12mo, pp. 282. New York: Dodd, Mead & Co. $1.50 net.

Longfellow, Henry Wadsworth. The Hanging of the Crane. Illustrated. 8vo. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $2 net.

Luther, Mark Lee. The Crucible. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 341. New York: The Macmillan Co. $1.50 net.

Lynde, Francis. Empire Builders. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 377. Indianapolis: The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

Maartens, Maarten. The New Religion: A Modern Novel. 12mo, pp. 382. New York: D. Appleton & Co.

His latest book is essentially what Mr. Maartens describes it in the subtitle, "A Modern Novel." The substance of the lesson drawn in this somewhat bitter satire seems to be that the religion which found its exponent in the priest or the minister of the Gospel has been replaced by a new religion, the religion of the medical specialist, whose sway over his deduced followers is more inexorable, more damaging in its consequences than that exercised by the protagonist of any other cult, ancient or modern. The main interest of the novel lies in its character delineations, which are confined almost entirely to types taken from the medical profession. These are vigorously drawn, and, with the exception of the old village physician, Dr. Rook, who believes in "letting nature alone," do not form an engaging array of portraits.

The principal character of the book is the famous nerve specialist, Dr. Russett, who prescribes for the heroine, Lucia Lomas, several years' treatment at a Swiss sanatorium, in which he is secretly interested. Thither Lucia goes, accompanied by her husband, and, altho there is really nothing seriously the matter with her, she is put through a course of treatment that brings her to the verge of a dangerous illness.

Under cover of this Swiss sanatorium many of the current fads of diet, dress, exercise, bathing are held up to ridicule, and the experiences of the patients who religiously follow out the regimen laid down by Dr. Vouvray, the head of the institution, in his elaboration of "the monkey theory" are decidedly novel and entertaining. Ludicrous as they are, however, as showing the lengths to which human gullibility may go, there is an undercurrent of tragic pathos in the story which lifts it out of the realm of the mere clever satire into a careful analysis of conditions which the author evidently thinks are fraught with danger to humanity.

The personages in the novel are masterly portrayals, but they do not excite the reader's sympathy, while the story, as a whole, in spite of its many brilliant passages, is not entirely convincing, and leaves the impression that in the treatment of his main theme the author has not been free from a tendency to exaggeration, which rather weakens his arraignment of the medical profession.

Maccunn, Florence A. Mary Stuart. Illustrated. 8vo, pp. xii-315. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. $2 net.

McLaren, L. L. High Living. Recipes from Southern Climes. 12mo, pp. 58. New York: Paul Elder & Co. 75 cents net.

McSpadden, J. Walker. Stories from Chaucer. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. xiv-234. New York: Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. 60 cents.

Madden, Eva. Two Royal Foes. Frontispiece. 12mo, pp. vi-343. New York: The McClure Co. $1.25 net.

Mattapoisett and Old Rochester, Massachusetts. Being a History of These Towns and also in part of Marion and a Portion of Wareham. Prepared Under the Direction of a Committee of the Town of Mattapoisett. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. xii-424. New York: The Grafton Press. $2 net.

Mighels, Philip Verrill. Sunnyside Tad. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 323. New York: Harper & Brothers. $1.25 net.

Miller, Olive Thorne. Harry's Runaway and What Came of It. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 243. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.25 net.

Morgan, C. Campbell, D.D. The Parables of the Kingdom. 12mo, pp. 221. New York: Fleming H. Revell Co. $1 net.

Morgan, George. The True Patrick Henry. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. xi-492. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Co. $2 net.

Oliver, Frederick Scott. Alexander Hamilton. An Essay on American Union. Frontispiece and a Map. 8mo, pp. xiii-502. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $2.50 net.

Ollivant, Alfred. Redcoat Captain. A Story of That Country. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 200. New York: The Macmillan Co. $1.50 net.

Poulsen, Emilie. Father and Baby Plays. Illustrated. 8vo, pp. x-98. New York: The Century Co. $1.25.

Pyle, Katharine, and Porter, Laura Spencer. Theodora. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. vi-271. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. $1.25 net.

Reade, Charles. The Cloister and the Hearth. Frontispiece. 12mo, pp. xi-722. New York: Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. $1.25 net.

Rich, Walter H. Feathered Game of the Northeast. 8vo, pp. xvi-432. With 85 full-page illustrations and a colored frontispiece by the author. New York: Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. $3.

Mr. Rich's book is the work of a practical sportsman, who has hunted nearly every bird of the eighty-seven specimens which he describes, and who has, at the same time, an evident fondness and appreciation of wood and lake, hill and vale, that will commend what he has written to the nature-lover, pure and simple, as well as to those, who, like himself, "study nature over a gun-barrel." In a way his book is rather unique of its kind; for the sportsman's manual is usually a dry compilation of technical information, very necessary, of course, to those who use it, but not at all suited, or intended, to be a literary companion. On the other hand, there is the thoroughgoing book of ornithology in the mazes of whose classifications the sportsman would be more lost than in the wilds of his own forests; or else, there is the recognized "nature book," lineal descendant of White's "Selborne," with its charming descriptions interspersed with entertaining observations on any one of the myriad objects, animate or inanimate, that go to make up the beauty of a country landscape—but all without classification, and quite useless as a work of reference.

The present volume is an attempt to combine the accurate, the practically useful with the picturesque in a way that should make it at once the necessary vade mecum of the sportsman who would know the best method and season, the kind of gun and ammunition, the most likely place and the proper breed of dog to reckon with in hunting a particular variety of game, as well as the companion of the man who likes a tale of the open, simply told, or a hunting yarn that is neither too technical in the telling, nor too improbable to remain in the realm of fact. Mr. Rich does strain credibility a trifle in some of his statements, a possible contingency of which he seems to be quite aware, as, for instance, in his account of woodcock-hunting, when he declares that he has seen two of these birds, in spite of all sporting traditions to the contrary, take to a tree when disturbed.

Mr. Rich's hunting has all been done in New England, and his book is consequently descriptive of that section of the country. On the whole, he has succeeded in making a thoroughly reliable and entertaining volume, whose illustrations, tho somewhat flat and lacking in perspective, are an aid to the text.

Rollins, Frank West. What Can a Young Man Do? 12mo, pp. viii-339. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. $1.50 net.

Schillings, C. S. In Wildest Africa. (Translated by Frederic Whyte.) Illustrated. New York: Harper & Brothers. $5 net.

President Roosevelt, who is both a lover and student of nature as well as "a mighty hunter," expresses himself in his "Outdoor Pastimes of an American Hunter" as highly delighted with Mr. Schillings' previous work, "With Flashlight and Rifle in Equatorial East Africa." It is, indeed, not too much to say that the latter book produced a sensation among those who had hitherto been satisfied with such works as those of Mungo Park, Gordon Cumming, Livingstone, and Stanley.

From the dim twilight of African travel indicated by the first-mentioned we have now gradually emerged not only to the daylight of more modern explorers, but to the wonderful flashlight of Mr. Schillings, by which he illuminates the midnight darkness of the African jungle, and shows us the beasts of prey prowling after their food. The power of the photograph in revealing the marvels of tropical scenery has never been so clearly demonstrated as in this volume, wherein the spirit of adventure is blent with the scientific spirit of investigation. For the especial feature to be noticed in his work is this: Mr. Schillings is not a mere hunter like Gordon Cumming. His pride does not lie in the certainty with which he can pull a trigger and kill a lion. He is a naturalist. He loves rather to observe and chronicle than to obtain victory over the beasts. He would rather take a snapshot than a rifle shot. In fact, he is the African traveler up to date, and while his works are full of romantic adventure, fine description, and important scientific observation, their principal characteristic is the sympathy they evince with the wild creatures, and the wild scenery which he has set before us so cleverly both by pen and camera.

The three hundred illustrations, made direct from negatives which the author himself produced, are quite unexampled in the history of such sort of art. Never has there been such a picture produced as that of the vultures hovering in air over the carcass of a lion, that of a flight of flamingoes, or of the lion emerging from his lair in the darkness; the scene of Mr. Schillings' travels is the region of the great lakes, from the caravan route of which he branched off into the uninhabited veldts. His adventures were various, and those who follow his footsteps will be amazed by the striking description he gives that African wild life which must ere long vanish away as completely as the bison has been banished from the valley of the Mississippi.

Sheehan, Canon P. A. Lisheen, or The Test of the Spirits. 12mo, pp. vi-454. New York: Longmans, Green & Co.

Sheridan, Richard Brinsley. The Rivals. Introduction by Brander Mathews. Illustrated. 8mo, pp. ix-132. New York: Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. $3.50 net.

Silberrad, Una L. The Good Comrade. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 365. New York: Doubleday, Page & Co. $1.50 net.

Smith, Gertrude. Little Girl and Philip. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 188. New York: Harper & Brothers. $1.30 net.

Smith, Nora Archibald. The Adventures of a Doll. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. i-64. New York: The McClure Co.

Stephens, Robert Neilson, and Westerley, George Hembert. Clementina's Highwayman. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 335. Boston: L. C. Page & Co. $1.50 net.

Stevenson, Robert Louis. The Sea Fogs. (With an Introduction by Thomas Rutherford Bacon.) Frontispiece. 12mo, pp. xvi-24. New York: Paul Elder & Co.

Tabb, John B. Quips and Quiddits, Quies for the Quirious. Illustrated. 12mo. Boston: Small, Maynard & Co.

Tyler, Lyon Gardiner, LL.D. Narratives of Early Virginia 1606-1625. Map and Two Facsimiles. 8vo, pp. xv-478. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. $3 net.

Warner, Anne. Susan Clegg and a Man in the House. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 279. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. $1.50 net.

Weir, Archibald, M.A. An Introduction to the History of Modern Europe. 12mo, pp. xv-340. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $2 net.

Weyman, Stanley J. Laid Up in Lavender. 12mo, pp. 329. New York: Longmans, Green & Co.

Whyte, Christina Gowans. Nina's Career. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. vii-314. New York: The Macmillan Co. $1.50 net.

Accuracy is the first Essential of a World History

Any but the Best is unsatisfactory

WHEN you buy a reference work the first requirement should be accuracy. In conversation with friends, in listening to a public speaker, in reading your newspaper—especially in reading Literary Digest—there come up countless questions of history, covering a wide range of space and time. Facts are stated which you wish to verify. Characters in history are alluded to whom you wish to know more about. Present-day events are discussed in the light of past occurrences. You desire additional information. You must have in your library a historical reference work or these questions must pass unanswered, and come up again and again, and still remain unanswered.

In a world history that is not entirely authentic, you may find an answer to your question, but you do not know whether it is a guess or the truth. With such a work you are in the position of a man who carries an unreliable watch. Every time he looks at it he wonders, "is it right?" and the more important the engagement, the more vexatious the uncertainty.

There are several publications put forward as universal histories. Some deal only with the prominent personal characters of history—some with famous events—some, even more restricted, deal with the great military achievements, and others, while claiming to cover the whole general field of history, are the product of a single mind, and therefore can be neither authentic nor complete, for no one man, no matter how learned, could write an authoritative history of the whole world. Even if it were possible in the span of a long life for one man to do the research and investigation necessary, the account he would give would be sure to bear the impress of his mind—would be influenced by his view of life, his disposition and temperament.

The Historians' History of the World is a work of cosmopolitan authorship

It presents the work of two thousand historians and its special contributors represent the scholarship of eighteen of the leading universities of the world. It is written in the light of the latest research and is as accurate as the intelligence of the present day and the tireless work of the world's greatest historians of all ages, combined with unlimited means for special research and investigation, could make it.

Literary Digest readers have shown great interest in this splendid work and we are especially desirous that every one interested shall learn fully of its great usefulness and far-reaching importance.

If you will write us at once, we shall send you full details as to the work itself and the extremely favorable terms on which it is offered while the present edition lasts.

JOHN WANAMAKER

NEW YORK

PHILADELPHIA

A Partial List of Modern Contributors

Professor F. York Powell
Oxford University
Dr. Thomas Kelly Cheyne
Oxford University
Professor C. W. C. Oman
Oxford University
Dr. Adolph Harnack
University of Berlin
Dr. Alfred Rambaud
University of Paris
Dr. G. W. Botsford
Columbia University
Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart
Harvard University
Professor Andrew C. McLaughlin
University of Michigan
Dr. James T. Shotwell
Columbia University, New York
Dr. Adolph Erman
University of Berlin
Dr. Joseph Halevy
College de France, Paris
Dr. Eduard Meyer
University of Berlin
Dr. Hermann Diels
University of Berlin
Dr. Wilhelm Soltau
Zabern University
Dr. Otto Hirschfeld
University of Berlin
Dr. Theodor Noldeke
University of Strasburg
Dr. Julius Wellhausen
University of Gottingen
Dr. I. Goldziher
University of Vienna
Dr. Ulrich von Wilamowitz Mollendorff
University of Berlin
Dr. Franz Krones
University of Vienna
Dr. H. Marnali
University of Budapest
Dr. R. Koser
University of Berlin
Dr. A. S. Rappoport
University of Paris
Professor D. H. Mueller
University of Vienna
Professor A. Vambery
University of Budapest

No Mighty Health Underwear Colds

Wright's Health Underwear differs from common underwear in that it protects the wearer from catching colds. It is made, as no other underwear is, on the wonderful Wright's loop-fleece principle. Upon the foundation fabric is woven a myriad of tiny loops of wool forming a fleecy lining to the garment. This open woven fleece gives the skin the requisite ventilation, allows the pores to breathe, carries off perspiration and allows it to evaporate outside, leaving the skin dry and healthy.

Ordinary catch-cold underwear is tightly woven, non-absorbent, holds the perspiration on the skin—chills the body—gives cold. With its many advantages Wright's Health Underwear costs no more than common underwear. Ask your dealer for it and write for free book, "The Loop of Health and the Fleece of Comfort."

WRIGHT'S HEALTH UNDERWEAR CO.,
75 Franklin Street, New York.

A Comparison

Perspiration cannot affect Litholin water-proofed linen collars or cuffs. They keep their perfect shape in all weathers.

Moisture will immediately wilt the best of ordinary linen collars and cuffs—the button-holes break, and they crack and fray.

LITHOLIN Water-Proofed Linen Collars and Cuffs look exactly like linen because they are linen. Save time, worry, expense, and increase comfort. Wiped with damp cloth, they are as clean and white as when new.

Collars 25c. Cuffs 50c.

If your dealer has not them in stock, send style, size, number wanted, with remittance, and we will mail post paid. Illustrated catalogue of all the latest fashionable styles, free on request.

THE FIBERLOID COMPANY, Dept. 13.
7 Waverly Place, New York

LITHOLIN
WATERPROOFED LINEN.

TO SUCCEED IN LIFE

The correct words to use are readily found and their use explained in "Desk-Book of Errors in English," by Frank H. Vizetelly. Price, 75c.; by mail, 85c.

Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York

USE CORRECT LANGUAGE

'Ever-Ready' Safety Razor ^{$1.00}

GUARANTEED best of all safety razors. Complete for $1.00 with silver-nickel frame—12 Ever-Ready blades, handle and blade stopper, attractively cased. Extra blades, 10 for 50 cents, which also fit Gem and Star frames. Ten new Ever-Ready blades, exchanged for ten dull ones and 35c. On sale everywhere. Mail orders prepaid, $1.00.

American Safety Razor Co.
320 Broadway, New York.

12 BLADES
With Every Set

CURRENT POETRY

The Air-ship—at Daybreak.

BY DON MARQUIS.

The Morning Star sinks swooning down, the pale
Moon quits the chase,
We race the rushing Sun across the clamorous fields of space;

For, tho our prow be wreathed about with purple
sprays of Night,
Our pinions flick the Dawn that strives to gain upon our flight.

And now, with forelocks fluttering and manes blown out behind,
Come thundering down the sunward slopes the Coursers of the Wind—

For God's sake, UP!—give place to them, wild thoroughbreds of air;
The rush of those tempestuous hoofs no man-wrought wings may dare!

Ahead, no mirrored gleam flares up from stream or mere below;
Behind, our cloud-wake catches fire and sets the east aglow.

Poised on the very tip of Time, a spinning satellite,
We float between the flood of day and ebb of yesternight.
Awake, look up, O cynic world!—as in the days of old Still godlike progress stabs the sky with shafts of shaken gold.

—Putnam's Monthly (November).

The Ballad of the Mothers.

BY THEODOSIA GARRISON.

'Twas Mary crooned Her Mother song—
A tender song and low—
And Her fair body to the tune
Moved softly to and fro
As elsewhere in April air
The tall white lilies blow.

'Twas Mary lifted up Her face,
Her gentle face and sweet;
One stood before Her happiness
With dust on head and feet,
And in her eyes the look that cries
Like-maimed things in the street.

And long on Mary's Son she looked
As one sore famished
Looks on the feast he may not share,
Fair wine and plenteous bread.
And, "I am one whose single son
Died on her breast," she said.

"I am that mother whose one son
Died roselike on my breast
Or ever thrice upon my lips
His baby lips were prest
Or ere he spake for my love's sake
The name I loved the best.

"And because," she said, "I heard strange things
Nor prince nor priest could stem
Of this a child of virgin born
In the inn at Bethlehem,
A weary way from break of day
I come to beg of them.

"Only a little gift I ask
Who fear to ask in vain—
Let Thy child lie a moment's space
Where my own child has lain—
So if truth men tell some miracle
May blunt this sword-edged pain."

'Twas Mary raised in Her sweet arms
The Christ-Child to Her guest
As one might hold the Keys of Heaven;

Superior to Lemonade is HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.
A teaspoonful added to a glass of cold water, with sugar, makes a delicious summer drink.

Tool Cabinets

for

Christmas Presents

Fine polished oak cabinets containing high grade standard tools, identically the same as we have sold in our store to mechanics since 1848.

Outfit No.	47-21	Tools,	$ 7.50
"	52-24	"	10.00
"	53-36	"	15.00
"	54-40	"	20.00
"	100-00	"	85.00

Further details in Catalogue No. 2353 (Automobilists should send for Circular No. 2354 of the "TOURIST AUTOKIT.")

HAMMACHER, SCHLEMMER & CO.
HARDWARE, TOOLS AND SUPPLIES
New York, Since 1848. 4th Ave. & 13th St.

FINANCING
AN ENTERPRISE

By FRANCIS COOPER

A practical book, describing clearly and plainly the methods of securing money for enterprises. Vol. I tells how to investigate, protect and capitalize an enterprise; Vol. II how to prepare and present it to secure money, together with a full discussion of prospectuses, guaranteed stock, employment of promoters, commissions, underwriting, etc. Free from advertising, and the only successful work on promotion. Second edition.
540 pages. Buckram binding, charges paid, $4.00.
Send for pamphlet and list of business books.

THE RONALD PRESS CO.
Rooms 33-35, 229 Broadway, New York

FRACTIONAL LOTS—STOCKS

High-grade dividend paying stocks and selected income bearing bonds in lots of one share upwards. Write for circular A 21, describing securities listed upon the New York Stock Exchange yielding from 5 to over 10% per annum at present quotations.

MAILED UPON REQUEST WITHOUT CHARGE TO YOU.
DAILY MARKET LETTER.

J. F. Pierson, Jr., & Co.
(Members New York Stock Exchange)
66 BROADWAY : : NEW YORK

THE PAN-TOG CHAIR

For $8.50

A Gentleman's Dressing Chair presses and creases trousers while you sleep. Positively prevents baggy knees. Saves time and money. Made of quartered oak, golden finish, and birch, mahogany finish. When ordering, state finish desired. Formerly sold for $12.50.
Shipped same day order is received if remittance accompanies order. Descriptive folder on request.

Central Mantel Co., 1216 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

PROSELYTING JEWS AND CATHOLICS

In a Letter to

THE HOMILETIC REVIEW

for November, Rev. Madison C. Peters gives his views on this subject. 30c. per copy; $3.00 per year.
FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY 44-60 E. 23d St., N. Y.

"Riding Comfort" for horse and man—a genuine

Whitman

Special Saddles Built for Individual Requirements. Illustrated catalogue free, containing everything from "Saddle to Spur."

The Mehlbach Saddle Co., No. 104 Chambers St., N.Y. City
Successors to THE WHITMAN SADDLE CO.

$12
to $65

The stranger mother prest
The Holy Child against the wild
Heart with all grief possest.

Deep in her eyes the Christ-Child gazed—
"Now strange, most strange," quoth she,
"I see no more this stable mean,
A garden fair I see
Where children play as roses sway
And one smiles down at me."

Deep in her eyes the Christ-Child gazed—
"Now strange, most strange," she said.
"I hear a voice more glad than song
'O Heart, be comforted!'
And grief thrice sore is mine no more,
But peace most sweet instead."

'Twas Mary smiled for very joy—
"Mine own, my little Son,
Great is the bliss to come to me—
Mother, thrice blessed of One Whose hand shall make the blind to wake,
The lame to rise and run."

The Christ-Child hid on Mary's breast
The tears She might not see—
"O Mother, Mother, even Thou
Must break Thy heart for me;
The dumb may talk, the halt may walk,
But who may comfort Thee
Against those days, when men shall raise A cross on Calvary?"
—Harper's Bazar (December).

PERSONAL

Taught Stevenson English Literature.—The man who taught English literature to four great English writers, Robert Louis Stevenson, J. M. Barrie, S. R. Crockett, and Dr. John Watson ("Ian Maclaren") has just died in Scotland. His name was David Masson, and a writer in the Milwaukee Sentinel gives a short history of Professor Masson's life and comments upon the four famous pupils. To quote:

All these novelists studied at Edinburgh University, where Professor Masson occupied the chair of English literature from 1865 to 1895. Stevenson and Barrie were members of his classes in the early seventies, while among other pupils were William Archer, the dramatic critic, and Lord Rosebery.

Of all these, however, perhaps the one who bears the deepest testimony to Masson's influence is J. M. Barrie, who once declared that he made up his mind to go in for literature one day when he saw the professor rummaging over a second-hand book-stall with $1,500 in bank-notes bulging out of his pockets.

A whimsical "thumb-nail sketch" of his old pedagogue by Barrie is worth quoting. It comes in a series of recollections of the novelist's college days, the "Edinburgh Eleven," and is as follows. "Masson always comes to my memory first, knocking nails into his desk, or trying to tear the gas bracket from its socket. He said that the Danes scattered over England, taking such a hold as a nail takes when it is driven into wood. For the moment he saw his

PLEASANT SUMMER

Right Food the Cause.

A Wis. woman says:

"I was run down and weak, troubled with nervousness and headache for the last six years. The least excitement would make me nervous and cause severe headache.

"This summer I have been eating Grape-Nuts regularly and feel better than for the six years past.

"I am not troubled with headache and nervousness, and weigh more than I ever have before in my life. I gained 5 lbs. in one week."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

To Make Insurance Doubly Sure

You should see that your policy is written by the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York. Those words, "of New York," by themselves mean a lot on an insurance policy since last year. The Mutual Life was organized in 1843, and is the oldest active Insurance Company in America, and the strongest in the world.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company

belongs absolutely to its policy holders, and is now being managed solely in their interest. It had, December 31, 1906, 495 millions of assets, being 80 millions in excess of the 415 millions required by law as a reserve for paying insurance risks and all other legal liabilities. The perfect quality of its investments excites praise and wonder in all judges of such matters; but it does more; it appeals to the plain people whose money comes slowly, who value safety, and who insist that insurance shall be insurance indeed.

The Time to Act is NOW.

For the new forms of policies write to

The Mutual Life Insurance Company
of New York, N. Y.

FRENCH—GERMAN SPANISH—ITALIAN
Spoken, Taught and Mastered by the
LANGUAGE
PHONE
METHOD
Combined with The Rosenthal
Common Sense Method of Practical Linguistry

The Latest and Best Work of Dr. Richard S. Rosenthal
YOU HEAR THE EXACT PRONUNCIATION OF EACH
WORD AND PHRASE. A few minutes' practice several times a day at spare moments gives a thorough mastery of conversational French, German, Spanish or Italian.
Send for testimonials, booklet and letter.
THE LANGUAGE-PHONE METHOD
802 Metropolitan Building, Broadway and 16th Street, New York

The Pratt Teachers' Agency

70 Fifth Avenue, New York
Recommends teachers to colleges, schools and families.
Advises parents about schools. WM. O. PRATT, Mgr.

The Michigan Military Academy

Ideal site. Fine equipment. Prepares for all colleges.
Strong teaching. Genuine military training. Symmetrical culture. Clean atmosphere. Not a reform school.
LAWRENCE CAMERON HULL, President and Superintendent, Orchard Lake, Michigan.

SUCCESSFUL TEACHING is the title of a new book on teaching, embracing prize studies by a number of practical teachers in different parts of the country. Valuable introduction by James M. Greenwood, Supt. of Schools, Kansas City, Mo. Cloth, $1.00 net; by mail, $1.08. Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York.

LEARN THE REALTY BUSINESS

The money made in the business is the fruit of knowledge. Every man who owns or expects to own property, every man who is now or intends to be engaged in this profitable business, should investigate

C. E. Wood of Wood, Harmon & Co.

Our Course Prepared by WOOD, HARMON & CO., of New York who have made a spectacular success in the real estate business and are regarded as experts. Ours is the broadest and best correspondence school. A Justice of the Supreme Court, and the Chairman Interstate Commerce Commission on our Board of Directors. Over 160 Courses in Business, Engineering, and College Branches. Send for free booklet, stating your preference.

Intercontinental University
1102 L St., Washington, D. C.

FRENCH and GERMAN BOOKS
PHRASE
TEXT BOOKS
DICTIONARIES IN ALL LANGUAGES
BRENTANO'S
3rd AVE. & 27th ST. NEW YORK.

HEATING the HOME

❑ A subject vitally important to everyone—personal health, as well as comfort, is at stake.

❑ Great advance has been made by sanitary science in the methods for home heating, with healthfulness as the first consideration—after that, economy.

❑ We are confident that in our

we are nearest the perfect system for satisfactory and economical home heating. We cannot give you the reasons here. We ask you to write for our descriptive, illustrated book P, which explains the merits of our methods—gives the reason "why"—makes the appeal to your own experience. This book is mailed free.

Capitol Boilers and Radiators are equally valuable for heating Public Buildings.

United States Heater Company.
DETROIT, MICH.

Branch Offices and Agencies in all principal cities

The Kewanee System of Water Supply combines over ten years of practical experience together with the technical knowledge of trained experts, and includes pumping and storage facilities to meet individual needs.

With the Kewanee System there are no attic nor elevator tank troubles. Modern, scientific principles only are utilized.

Our new 64-page Catalogue will give you detailed information on water supply for country and suburban homes, public institutions, hotels, city residences, etc.

The cost of installing a Kewanee System is from $90 upwards, according to the individual needs and local conditions.

Write for catalogue and let us help you solve your water supply problem economically and permanently. Mention Literary Digest. Ask for catalog No. 27.

Kewanee Water Supply Co.
Kewanee, - - Ill.

The Giant Heater

applied to central-draught lamp, gas jet (open flame or mantle burner), artificial or natural gas, will heat any ordinary room comfortably in zero weather, giving Heat and Light at no Additional Cost. No ashes, no trouble, clean and odorless, thoroughly circulates and purifies the air. Easily applied and ornamental. Just the thing for sick room, bath, bedroom, den or office.

Send for booklet and testimonials. Price complete, carriage prepaid, Polished Brass, $1.50; Nickel Plated, 2.00. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded if returned in 10 days.

THE GIANT HEATER CO., 2264 Monmouth St., Springfield, Mass.

HAVE YOU GOT ONE ?

We mean a Daus Improved Tip Top Duplicator, that ideal assistant always ready to quickly make 100 copies from pen-written and 50 copies from typewritten original. Complete Duplicator, cap size (prints 8 1/2 x 13 in.) costs $7.50. But we don't want your money until you are satisfied, so if interested just write us to send it on 10 Days' Trial without Deposit. That's fair enough, isn't it? Then send to-day. Circular of larger sizes upon request.

The Felix P. Daus Duplicator Co.
Daus Bldg., 113 John St. New York

desk turned into England; he whirled an invisible hammer in the air, and down it came on the desk with a crash. No one who has sat under Masson can forget how the Danes nailed themselves upon England. It was when his mind groped for an image that he clutched the bracket. He seemed to tear his good things out of it. Silence overcame the class; some were fascinated by the man; others trembled for the bracket. It shook, groaned, and yielded. Masson said another of the things that made his lectures literature; the crisis had passed, and everybody breathed again."

It was in 1895 that this rugged, picturesque, literary veteran, so long a familiar figure in Edinburgh streets, resigned his chair to live out his days in retirement. He had been called to the university thirty years before to succeed the famous ballad scholar, Professor Aytoun, and twelve years before that he had taken the vacant place of the poet Clough as professor of English at University College, London. At nineteen he was editor of a religious magazine in Aberdeen, his birthplace, and at twenty-five, when he went down to London, he was one of the best-known magazine writers in Scotland. Before he became a professor, he was the first editor of Macmillan's Magazine, which, curiously enough, issued its last number this month and has died with its first great editor.

It was in these days that Carlyle, one of his intimate friends, warned him not to fritter away his talents on little things, but to concentrate them on something big. The result of this was his masterly "Life and Times of Milton," in six volumes the great work of his life, which occupied all the leisure of twenty-one years. More brilliant is the smaller "Life of Chatterton," and the fourteen-volume edition of De Quincey's works, the outcome of a long and intimate friendship with the famous opium-eater, whose life he contributed to the English Men of Letters series. There are many people in Great Britain to-day who feel that in "Davie a real, kindly Scot," Edinburgh has lost her most distinguished citizen.

Amusing the Moorish Sultan.—Among the oddities in the November magazines, is a clever article in The World Today by John H. Avery, describing the amusements of the Moorish Sultan. Mr. Avery was for two years the official instructor in photography to his sherifian majesty. He found the Sultan a great lover of European sports. Like the late Shah of Persia, he found infinite diversion in mechanical toys, motor-boats, and automobiles, which were brought from Europe at great cost for his amusement. He became a great enthusiast of tennis, billiards, and polo. A craze for wild beasts was satisfied by installing a royal zoo in Fez; and then came the fancy for photography. As Mr. Avery tells it:

After the wild beasts the Sultan took a fancy to photography, and Sir Harry Maclean sent for me, at the same time bidding me order some half and full-plate cameras mounted in gold and silver. Here was a fad that gave more offense than ever in high quarters. Snapshots of the Sultan in native dress and European uniforms were bandied back and forth among wondering country kaid, and were generally used to foment hatred and disloyalty. Every one knows how the orthodox Moslem dislikes to be photographed, since any representation of the human form is forbidden by the religious law. Judge, then, how great was the shock when the Moors saw their Sultan—"The Shadow of God"—himself kodaking here and there like an enthusiastic tripper! Still, the Sultan was really interested in "snapshots." And while his gorgeous cameras were being made in Paris and London, he set gangs of slaves at work on a palatial studio and darkroom that cost $30,000. It was a huge-domed structure, wainscoted with carved teak, and its appliances and fittings cost a small fortune. As soon as I arrived in Fez I began to explain the working of a small hand-camera, of course through an interpreter. It was a little hard for the latter to find Arabic equivalents for "focus," "lens," and so on. But the Sultan is really an intelligent man; he soon mastered

How to heat your house: By Vapor.

"What is 'Vapor'?"

Our book tells: An improvement on steam and hot-water, eliminating the objectionable features of both of these systems.

Will you have the book?
Vapor Heating Company

Broomell's Vapor System of Heating
125 South Broad St., Philadelphia

WHITELAW'S
Paper Blankets

SANITARY · HEALTHFUL · WARM ·

BED Clothing should be warm and light. Blankets and thick quilts should never be put upon the bed. The weight is depressing, retards perspiration, causes nightmare and is unhealthy. Paper Blankets are warmer than woolen, and weigh only ten ounces each. Made of strong sterilized paper, tid finish, will not slip. Cost less than washing blankets. They are an application of A Well-known Scientific Principle. Worn between sheet and topcover. PRICE $3.00 A DOZEN, F.O.B. Cincinnati, or we will send two full size for sample, postpaid, for $1.00. Also make the famous Paper Diapers that Appeal to the mother of the babe to be worn inside the regular diaper and destroyed when soiled. 75 cents per 100 F.O.B. Cincinnati, or will mail 50, postpaid, for $1.00. If skeptical send 10cts. in stamps for samples of diapers.

WHITELAW PAPER GOODS CO.
Dept. 2, Cincinnati, Ohio

These trade-mark cross lines on every package

Cresco Grits and BARLEY CRYSTALS.

Perfect Breakfast and Diet Health Cereals.
PANSY FLOUR for Pastry, Cake and Biscuit.
Unlike all other goods. Ask grocers.
For Cook or Sample, write.

FARWELL & RHINES, WATERTOWN, N. Y., U. S. A.

Beers Brothers' THERMOSTAT

You need one in your house. Keeps the temperature exactly right, day and night. Saves coal, saves worry, works on Furnaces, Hot-Water or Steam Heaters. Any one can attach.

It Tends the Heater.

The simplest apparatus made, guaranteed to work perfectly and last for years. B. & G. and little homes need it. Send today for booklet.

BEERS BROS. THERMOSTAT CO.
Culver Road A, Rochester, N. Y.

the mysteries of the little instrument and prest me to pass on to the bigger machines wherewith he might take groups of his friends.

Great was his delight when he snapt his first successful picture, showing Sir Harry Maclean caressing his favorite hound. For some weeks the despot ran around hugging cameras like one possessed, and devising subjects of all kinds, chiefly the ludicrous. Borrowing the bicycle of Doctor Verdon, his English physician, his Majesty insisted on Kaid Bel Harty, keeper of the palace keys, trying to ride. But so great was the Sultan's hilarity over the performance that he could not take the picture. Bel Harty is a tall, dignified old man of sixty odd, and all of us Christians earned his undying hatred by reason of laughter it was impossible to suppress, as he lurchd crazily this way and that, and finally fell sprawling in the mud!

Goldwin Smith and America.—It is now about forty years since Goldwin Smith left his chair of history at Oxford University and came to live in the United States. At the age of forty-five he already had won a high place in English academic life. It was a long step from the old-university life at Oxford to a professorship at Cornell, then an institution of a few years' standing. With everything to keep him in England, Goldwin Smith put all aside to come to the aid of the United States during her reconstruction days.

Prof. George M. Wrong writes an appreciative article on Professor Smith in the Boston Transcript, from which we quote:

A scholar who not merely by his writings but by residence and personal influence has been a considerable factor in the life of three States during the past sixty years is certainly noteworthy, and such is Prof. Goldwin Smith. Now a man of eighty-four, he is spending the evening of his life in scholarly leisure at his beautiful home in Toronto. His interest in public affairs and in letters remains unabated. Hardly a week passes but a communication from Goldwin Smith appears in some leading periodical of either the United States or Great Britain, and invariably there is the grace of style which gives distinction to all he writes. Never was there a better illustration of the deep truth that "the style is the man" than in his case. Vehement, ironical, one-sided, merciless, as he has sometimes been, always he has carried himself with easy grace; if he must thrust his rapier through his opponent he has done it like a polished courtier; never for a moment has he forgotten the dignity and poise of an English gentleman. On the political hustings, on the platform, in private intercourse, he has at no time let himself be so hurried as to be slipshod. It may be doubted if Goldwin Smith ever committed the fault that besets lesser men in speaking of beginning a sentence and leaving it unfinished. The smooth yet incisive phrases come to his lips so complete in form that they make one wonder whether this readiness and polish are the native gifts of genius or only the result of careful preparation, which is the highest art, because it conceals art.

Goldwin Smith finally made his home in Canada, where his ideas favoring Canadian annexation to the

HEART RIGHT

It Makes a Great Difference.

"About two years ago I became alarmed because my husband had attacks from fainting spells caused by weak heart, from drinking coffee."

"At first he did not like Postum, I had not then learned to boil it long, as directions say, to get the rich flavor and brown color."

"After it was made right, he liked it, and now for more than a year he has not been troubled with his heart—in fact, his general health is better than for years." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Where Time is Vital—the HOWARD WATCH

is Commander Peary's Mainstay

On his dashes for the Pole, Arctic Explorer Peary is entirely dependent upon his Howard Watches for observations and safe return to his ship.

Peary's three movements are shown below in the special aluminum case made for this purpose. These same watches go with him on his next trip.

Your dealer sells Howards at $35 and up to $150.

Write for a copy of our book "WATCH WISDOM."

E. HOWARD
WATCH
COMPANY

Precision

Watches

Hammer St.,
Waltham, Mass.
U. S. A.

COLT REVOLVERS

for Accuracy, Reliability, Durability and Perfect Workmanship

Are Recognized by Every Nation as

Catalog "Police" describes all models.
Mailed on request.

COLT'S PATENT FIREARMS MFG. CO.

Hartford, Conn.

15a Pall Mall, London, S. W.

THE TRAVELER'S HANDBOOK.
Tells you all about foreign shopping, hotels, tips, usages, etiquette, and other details of comfort and convenience. 12mo, cloth, $1.00 net. Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York and London.

TOLSTOY AND HIS PROBLEMS. A scholarly essay on Tolstoy and his beliefs, by AVILMER MAUDE, 12mo, cloth, 226 pages. $1.00. Funk & Wagnalls Company, Pubs., New York.

The ONLY MACHINE

The only machine ever invented which will add, multiply and divide by automatic, instantly responsive keys. No lever to operate.

The only machine which can prove its claims for being the most rapid adding or calculating machine.

The only machine which can show a record (16 yrs. 8 mo. 13 das.) for durability to exceed 8 years without a single repair.

The only machine which has been used on all additions, multiplications and divisions found in bookkeeping, bill extending, cost keeping and pay-roll departments of practically every line of business, and proven successful in every place.

The only machine ever invented which will add all the columns at one time by the simple touching of keys and nothing more. Write for pamphlet and special trial offer. Comptometer sent, express prepaid, on trial, to responsible parties in the U. S. or Canada.

Felt & Tarrant Mfg. Co., 863 N. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

Our readers are asked to mention THE LITERARY DIGEST when writing to advertisers.

"A Pure Cocoa of Undoubted Quality and Excellence of Manufacture"

Walter Baker's

A distinguished London physician, in giving some hints concerning the proper preparation of cocoa, says:

Registered,
U. S. Pat. Off.

"Start with a pure cocoa of undoubted quality and excellence of manufacture, and which bears the name of a respectable firm. This point is important, for there are many cocoas on the market which have been doctored by the addition of alkali, starch, malt, kola, hops, etc."

48 HIGHEST AWARDS in Europe and America

Walter Baker & Co. Ltd.
DORCHESTER, MASS.

Established 1780

Whitman's

Chocolates and Confections

known for their purity and goodness

For sale where the best is sold.

STEPHEN F. WHITMAN & SON,
1316 Chestnut Street, Phila.

Established 1842.

A Dainty Feast

For luncheon or supper at evening's end, what is more tempting than a deviled crab, piping hot in his glistening shell.

McMENAMIN'S Deviled Crabs

are ready for your table, fresh and good as you could get them at the shore.

Tender and sweet—hermetically sealed an hour after they are caught. Deliciously flavored and spiced ready to heat and put into the shells. Good for all time—any time—anywhere.

How to Cook Crabs

Write for free Crab Book which gives recipes for many appetizing crab dishes.

Shells accompany each can—see that you get them.

For sale by leading grocers.

McMENAMIN & COMPANY,
35 Bridge Street, Hampton, Va.

United States became very unpopular. But notwithstanding these radical opinions, he came to be a great purifying force in Canadian public life. As Professor Wrong puts it:

You may meet an ambassador or a labor leader at his table. He takes an active interest in charitable work, and until the infirmities of age overtook him, visited among the poor in person. No good cause appeals to him in vain; and for him when it is a question of relieving suffering no barriers of race or creed exist. If he has any prejudices it is, as his books show, against Roman Catholics and Jews, but his name will be found among the helpers of the needy of both creeds in Toronto. As his recent writings show, his mind is keenly interested in religious topics, especially as to what may be behind the veil which screens from us the future life. Like Charles Kingsley, he has a keen curiosity to know what may be in store for the soul which passes into that other world. His keenly critical intellect has brought its own qualities to the study of the Bible. There was a time when Goldwin Smith wrote on the topic, "Does the Bible Sanction American Slavery?" This hardly seems now in his line. His critical efforts are turned not on the Southern planter, but on the Bible itself. Perhaps this restless critical faculty is the Nemesis of a life too purely intellectual. But behind it all is, to use the old patristic phrase, the heart "naturally Christian." Pure in life, loving his fellow-men, Goldwin Smith is surely among those for whom is reserved the blessings of the Sermon on the Mount.

He likes to talk of past days and surely his range of acquaintanceship has been unequaled. For a quarter of a century hardly a biography of an eminent Englishman has appeared without a reference to Goldwin Smith. He was history tutor at Oxford to King Edward, whose "charming manners," as he has said, were already noticeable in undergraduate days. He knew the Duke of Wellington, Sir Robert Peel, and Lord Palmerston. He was almost intimate with Carlyle. Gladstone was a close friend, albeit the friendship was interrupted in later years. In the United States he has met nearly all the national figures of the last half-century. One might go through an immense list of distinguished names and each of them would be proud to be called the friend of Goldwin Smith. If he has made no great book he has made a great reputation. At Toronto his public appearances have become rare. But he is still a member of the governing body of the University of Toronto and occasionally he can be induced to say a few words to the students. Most of them have been taught to believe and do believe that his views on the political destiny of Canada are mischievous. His views they hate, but him they love. When he rises to speak he is always greeted by prolonged cheers, and he never sits down without having said in polished phrase some words fitted to make them clearer thinkers and gentler, purer, nobler men.

Governor Comer and Alabama.—In an article on Governor Comer of Alabama, Mr. Herbert Quick, a writer in The Reader Magazine (October), prefaces his paper in the following manner:

For one modest business man to have crushed a corporation machine which had held a great State helpless for a generation, and to have successfully demanded of the people a new deal in its government, is a feat that makes the doer worthy of study. Such is Braxton Bragg Comer, who embodies "Progressivism" as against "Standpatism" in Alabama.

Mr. Quick then goes on to describe Governor Comer's political evolution. It is as intricate as it is interesting. It is the powerful story of the honest successful business man suddenly awakened to the duties of civic righteousness and the herculean struggle against wrong which follows such an awakening. Single-handed, Mr. Comer forced his principles before the public of Alabama, until he was

GREAT BEAR SPRING WATER.
"Its Purity has made it famous."

Soups
Stews and Hashes
are rendered much more tasty and appetizing by the use of

Lea & Perrins' Sauce

THE ORIGINAL WORCESTERSHIRE

It is a rare relish for Fish,
Meats, Game, Salads,
Cheese, etc.

John Duncan's Sons, Agents, N. Y.

Jaeger

SANITARY

UNDERWEAR

FOR

Men, Women and Children

IT IS PURE
IT IS POROUS
IT IS PROTECTIVE
IT IS

All Wool in all Weights and
All Weights for all Wants

Write for samples and booklet of particulars

DR. JAEGER'S S. W. S. CO.'S
Own Stores

New York: 306 Fifth Ave., 22 Maiden Lane
Brooklyn: 504 Fulton St. Boston: 228 Boylston St.
Phila.: 1516 Chestnut St. Chicago: 82 State St.
Agents in all Principal Cities.

A Life Saver Quick!

What to do till the doctor comes.
Deft hands and ready wits.
"EMERGENCY NOTES" posts everybody. A book for every household. Price 50 cents.

Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York.

ANTISEPTIC THROAT PASTILLES

Prepared according to a Formula of the Liverpool Throat Hospital
Sole Manufacturers and Exporters:
EVANS SONS LESCHER & WEBB Limited,
LIVERPOOL, LONDON AND NEW YORK.
None genuine unless bearing this above Trade Mark.
Agency for the United States:—
Evans Sons Lescher & Webb Ltd., 92 William St., New York

GUARANTEED UNDER THE FOOD AND DRUGS ACT, JUNE 30, 1906.

ACT LIKE MAGIC—Clear the air Passages from Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness.
Non-narcotic. Purely Antiseptic. Recommended by many physicians. 30 cents box by mail. Sample, 2-cent stamp.
EVANS SONS LESCHER & WEBB Limited, 92 William St., New York
Liverpool and London, Eng.

finally put in a position to make a contest for the governorship. Mr. Quick tells thus of the struggle:

The "white man's primary" is the real election in the Gulf States, and before this went Comer, now known and feared, for his last struggle with the machine. With the magnificent assurance of the real leader, he told the people that what he wanted in this election was—everything. He would trouble them, if they pleased, for the governorship, the lieutenant-governorship, the rest of the commission, and both branches of the legislature. Then he could get laws for rate-making, against the pass and the lobby, and the like. To this stature had grown the "man by the name of Comer," who had spoken to strangers from the doorstep! The State-machine pinched itself, found it was no dream, and rose to the fray. No gage of battle was now thrown down by minatory Colonel Faulkner. The lion's skin was all too short for the Comer peril, and must be eked out by the fox's. So the machine found a good, easy man, who was a natural orator, put in his mouth demands more radical than Comer's, knocked the head out of the "barrel," distributed the gum shoes, and moved on the enemy's works.

This natural orator was the handsome, eloquent, convivial, jovial, and kind-hearted lieutenant-governor, Dr. R. M. Cunningham, who challenged Mr. Comer to a joint debate, and fared as did the first opponent of Tom Johnson, of Cleveland, in Johnson's first campaign. In both cases it was a spell-binder against the man with the bludgeon of facts. Dr. Cunningham felt at once that new standards of discussion had been set up. His eloquent tributes to the beauty of Alabama's women and the chivalry of her sons were as fine as heart could wish. Comer stuck to freight rates. Cunningham cried out in polished periods for good roads. Everybody is for good roads, said Comer, but how about the pass evil and the lobby? Cunningham drew tears as he spoke for the "old veterans." Comer replied that he was one of them, while Cunningham was not; but how about reciprocal demurrage? Toen Cunningham came over to Comer's platform, and demanded more reform than did Comer. Comer, clinging to his man like a bulldog, replied that this was unconstitutional nonsense. Gradually it dawned on the spellbinder that something was walking remorselessly over him, trampling out his political life, and that the something was Braxton Bragg Comer, the man who could not make a speech. Comer carried sixty of the sixty-seven counties of the State, and won by twenty thousand votes.

MORE OR LESS PUNGENT

A Bit of a Hole.—DOCTOR—"Your husband will be all right now."

WIFE—"What do you mean? You told me he couldn't live a fortnight ago."

"Well, I'm going to cure him. Surely you are glad?"

"Puts me in a bit of a hole. I've bin and sold all his clothes to pay for his funeral."—Weekly Telegraph.

Getting Right.—POSSIBLE BOARDER—"Ah, that was a ripping dinner, and if that was a fair sample of your meals I should like to come to terms."

SCOTCH FARMER—"Before we gang any farther, was that a fair sample o' year appetite?"—Weekly Telegraph.

A Question of Endurance.—"How long will the editor be engaged?"

"How long kin ye wait?"—The Circle.

A Real Freak.—"Better send an inspector down to see what's the matter with this man's meter," said the cashier in the gas company's office to the superintendent.

"Oh!" began the superintendent, "we throw complaints about meters—"

"This is no complaint. He sends a check for the amount of his bill and says it's 'very reasonable.'"—The Catholic Standard and Times.

The Electric Washer

YOU can now have all your washings done by Electricity. The 1900 Electric "Self-Working" Washer does all the washing—and wrings out the clothes. Any electric light current furnishes the power needed. You connect up the washer just as you would put an electric light globe into its socket. Then—all you have to do to start the washer is—turn on the electricity.

In just a few minutes, you have a tubful of clothes washed clean. And—not a thread will be broken—not a seam strained—not an edge frayed nor a button split, broken or pulled off. There will be no "wash tears"—no "tub rips"—no "mending-basket" horrors. This washer has no complicated inside parts. There is nothing to beat, and strain your clothes. Nothing to pull and haul them about. The clothes cannot even rub against the sides of the tub. For—in this 1900 Electric "Self-Working" Washer, your clothes are held still.

The water, and soap, and the motion of the tub do all the washing. And your clothes are washed quicker and easier, and more thoroughly and economically than you have ever had washing done before. You can scald clothes, rinse them and "blue" them easier, and better in this 1900 Electric "Self-Working" Washer than you can any other way. Then—this is the only washer outfit that washes and wrings clothes. And it is the only washer that saves time, and labor, and wear on clothes.

It is the only "Self-Working" Washer that Pays for Itself. For this washer saves more than enough in a few months to pay its own cost, and then—it keeps right on saving. If you keep servants, they will stay with you contented. If you have a 1900 Electric "Self-Working" Washer to do the washing. Your servants will not have to dread wash-day drudgery. There won't be any discussion over the size of the washing. Wash-women will not be needed. Laundry bills will be saved. We do not ask you to take anything we say of this washer "for gospel," however. We do not ask you to believe anything. We say test the washer at our expense.

Prove our claims without cost to you. We will ship one of these 1900 Electric "Self-Working" Washers to any responsible party and prepay the freight. Take this washer and use it four weeks. Wash laces with it. Wash your heaviest blankets and quilts. Wash rugs. Then—if you are not convinced that the washer is all we say—don't keep it.

Just tell us you don't want the washer, and that will settle the matter. We won't charge you anything for the use you have had of it. The Trial is FREE. But—if you find the washer is all we claim—if you are pleased and satisfied with it—if you see where it will save time, and wash-women's wages, and laundry bills, and wear and tear on clothes—more than enough to pay for itself—then you can pay cash for the washer and get a liberal discount—or you can pay by the week—or by the month—out of what the washer saves for you.

This way you let the 1900 Electric "Self-Working" Washer Pay for Itself. Of course, we could not afford to make such an offer, if we did not know our washer to be all we claim. We do know our washer is all we claim—that it will do all we say—and save as we say. Therefore—we can afford to make you this FREE Trial Offer. Send for our finely illustrated new Washer Book. It is a thing of beauty in itself, and you will be glad to have it whether you need a washer now or not. Send no stamps. Just write your name and address on a post card—or in a letter—mail to us today and, by return post, you will receive our Washer Book. We send this to you FREE, for the asking.

Don't use up your strength and endanger your health doing your own washing. Don't wear out your nerves worrying over wash-women, and laundries, or troubles with servants. Let a 1900 Electric "Self-Working" Washer shoulder the drudgery of "Wash-Day"—save your clothes from wear and tear, and keep your servants contented. Ask for our Washer Book today. Address—The 1900 Washer Co., 3111 Henry St., Birmingham, N. Y. Or, if you live in Canada, write to the 1900 Washer Co., 885 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

VEST-POCKET STANDARD DICTIONARY

The latest addition to the Funk & Wagnalls Standard Dictionary Series. "A marvel of condensed information." 30,000 Vocabulary terms; 12 pages colored maps; many valuable supplementary features. Cloth, 25 cents; flexible leather, 50 cents, net; indexed, 5 cents extra. Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York and London.

ETHICS OF MARRIAGE

By H. S. POMEROY, M.D. Vital suggestions toward making the conjugal estate both sacred and happy. 190 pp. Price, $1.00. FUNK & WAGNALLS CO., N. Y.

Coal Bills Reduced 25% Comfort Increased 100%

by using

The Powers Heat Regulator

ON YOUR FURNACE OR BOILER.

Easily applied, fits any heater. Sold by all dealers or sent on trial. Automatic.

Send for FREE BOOK

THE POWERS REGULATOR CO.

37 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO
113 Fifth Avenue, NEW YORK

Our readers are asked to mention THE LITERARY DIGEST when writing to advertisers.

TARTARLITHINE

is the one effective remedy for Rheumatism: muscular, articular, inflammatory. Does not affect the heart nor upset the stomach.

Rheumatism

Tartarlithine rarely fails because it supplies the blood with the necessary substances to dissolve and remove the poison of Rheumatism—uric acid. We want every sufferer to try it, and will send a sample package with our booklet on the Treatment of Rheumatism free to every applicant.

FREE SAMPLE
and booklet on request

McKESSON & ROBBINS, Dept. M.
93 Fulton Street, New York
(Sole agents for the Tartarlithine Co.)

Vapo-Cresolene

For Whooping Cough, Croup, Bronchitis, Coughs, Grip, Hay Fever, Diphtheria, Scarlet Fever.

Confidence can be placed in a remedy which for a quarter century has earned unqualified praise. Restful nights are assured at once.

Cresolene is a boon to Asthmatics. All Druggists.

Send for descriptive booklet.

1. Cresolene Antiseptic Throat Tablets for the irritated throat, at your druggist or from us.

10c. in stamps.
THE VAPO-CRESOLENE CO.,
180 Fulton St., New York

HARTSHORN
SHADE ROLLERS
Bear the script name of Stewart Hartshorn on label.
Get "Improved," no tacks required.
Wood Rollers Tin Rollers

Makes and burns its own gas and produces a pure white, steady, safe, 100 candle power light. No wick, smoke, dirt, grease or odor.

THE BEST LIGHT
Lighted instantly. Over 200 styles. Agents wanted. Write for catalog.
THE BEST LIGHT CO.
93 E. 5th St., Canton, O.

Saving on Fines.—"In a few years," said the inventor, "we will be traveling by air-ship."
"I hope so," answered the automobilist. "It will be a joke on the country sheriffs."—Washington Post.

Skeptical.—A skeptic is a man who always puts mucilage on the back of a postage-stamp.—New York Times.

A Pertinent Question.—Tommy had been punished.

"Mama," he sobbed, "did your mama whip you when you were little?"

"Yes, when I was naughty."

"And did her mama whip her when she was little?"

"Yes, Tommy."

"And was she whipt when she was little?"

"Yes."

"Well," inquired the child, his brain cleared by the position he had just occupied, "who started it, anyway?"—Answers.

CURRENT EVENTS

Foreign.

November 1.—The new railroad bridge over the Pasig River, near Fort McKinley, falls, injuring three Americans and twenty Filipinos.

November 2.—A plot to kill Prince George of Serbia is frustrated.

November 4.—America purchases all the gold, about $2,000,000, in the open market in London.

November 5.—H. L. Sprague, of New York, brings suit against J. R. Booth, of Ottawa, to recover $2,500,000 for alleged breach of contract regarding the disposition of the Canada Atlantic Railway.

November 6.—The Netherlands Government presents a bill to Parliament to reclaim forty thousand acres of land from the Zuyder Zee.

Thirteen men are killed by an explosion on the German schoolship Blücher.

November 7.—The Presidents of Nicaragua, Honduras, and Salvador meet at Amapola and declare for peace in Central America.

Domestic.

November 1.—The Governors of Georgia, North Carolina, and Alabama hold a conference at Atlanta on the general situation in the South regarding railroad passenger rates.

November 2.—Shipments of gold from Europe to America to date reach almost to the $30,000,000 mark.

November 3.—President Roosevelt decides that an extra session of Congress is not needed to relieve the money stringency.

November 4.—Four thousand miners go on strike at Danville, Ill., objecting to being paid by check. Meat dealers announce a general advance in prices.

November 5.—One man is killed and three are wounded in an election-day riot in Kentucky.

November 6.—Receivers are appointed for the New York State Steel Company of Buffalo.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt offers the city of Newport, R. I., a $100,000 Y. M. C. A. building in memory of his father.

November 7.—The President issues a statement declaring the results of Tuesday's elections extremely gratifying.

Federal Judge Wellborn, at Los Angeles, Cal., fines the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad Company $330,000 for rebating.

A Happy Marriage

Depends largely on a knowledge of the whole truth about self and sex and their relation to life and health. This knowledge does not come intelligently of itself, nor correctly from ordinary everyday sources.

Sexology

(Illustrated)

by William H. Walling, A.M., M.D., imparts in a clear, wholesome way, in one volume:

Knowledge a Young Man Should Have.
Knowledge a Young Husband Should Have.
Knowledge a Father Should Have.
Knowledge a Father Should Impart to His Son.
Medical Knowledge a Husband Should Have.
Knowledge a Young Woman Should Have.
Knowledge a Young Wife Should Have.
Knowledge a Mother Should Have.
Knowledge a Mother Should Impart to Her Daughter.
Medical Knowledge a Wife Should Have.

Rich Cloth Binding, Full Gold Stamp, Illustrated, $3.00

Write for "Other People's Opinions" and Table of Contents

Puritan Pub. Co., Dept. B, Phila., Pa.

Beneficial to elderly people who suffer from dryness of mouth and throat. In boxes only.

SIX PER CENT

Persons engaged in business who wish to separate a part of their funds from their active capital should write to us for booklet "D," which explains our plan of receiving deposits by mail.

FIRST TRUST & SAVINGS BANK
CAPITAL $100,000⁰⁰ BILLINGS, MONT.

15 CENTS for trial 13 weeks. In this illustrated national weekly all the important news of the world is stated clearly, fairly, and briefly, for busy readers. Many special features of great interest. It is sincere, reliable, entertaining—THE paper for the home. $1 year; takes place of $2 to $4 papers. Try it, 13 wks. for 15c. Pathfinder, Wash., D. C.

The Pathfinder
EVERY WEEK
THE NATIONAL NEWS REVIEW

Financial Advertising will be given special attention in our issue of

NOVEMBER 30th

Our consistent policy of excluding doubtful and undesirable announcements, and the unquestioned confidence our readers have in our pages, combined with essential quality of circulation, makes our columns of ever-increasing value for conservative investment publicity.

FORMS CLOSE NOV. 22

The Literary Digest

THE STORY OF CARLYLE. An intimate study of the author's life, character, and works, by THOMAS ARNOLD. 12mo, cloth, 335 pages, illustrated. $1.00. Funk & Wagnalls Company, Pubs., New York.

BANKING BY MAIL

If your money is paying less than 6 per cent, you should write for booklet "F" which will tell you about our Six Per Cent. Certificates of Deposit.

EQUITABLE BANKING & LOAN CO.
CEO. A. SMITH, PRES. MACON, GA.

"Some lives are like"
Horse shoes
the more worn the brighter."
Busy wives who use SAPOLIO never seem to grow old. Try a cake...

Our readers are asked to mention THE LITERARY DIGEST when writing to advertisers.

THE LEXICOGRAPHER'S EASY CHAIR

In this column, to decide questions concerning the correct use of words, the Funk & Wagnalls Standard Dictionary is consulted as arbiter.

The Lexicographer does not answer anonymous communications.

"A. S. K., Cleveland, O.—"Why do the papers and periodicals persist in using the spelling pajamas for 'pyjamas'? I would like to know why somebody does not spell it correctly just once; it would be a big relief to me to see it correctly spelled."

The word referred to is derived from the Hindustani pañjāmā and is spelled correctly in any of the forms given below. Of these, the STANDARD DICTIONARY prefers the first: (1) pajamas; (2) pajamas; (3) pajamahs; (4) pyjamas; (5) pyjammass. Each one of the foregoing forms has the sanction of usage and all are recorded by English, Indian, and Anglo-Indian dictionaries.

"A. M. C., Randolph, Vt.—"Will you kindly state the difference between person and individual?"

The word person designates "a human being as including body and mind; a man, woman, or child; an individual." The word individual designates "anything that can not be divided or separated into parts without losing its identity; that which has definite and continuous existence; a single person, animal, or thing; especially, a human being." The distinction between these words is that person almost always denotes a human being (the exception being that in certain theological uses it is related to substance), and the word individual may be applied to persons and objects animate or inanimate.

"J. L. M., Springfield, Mass.—"Is the following sentence correct, 'It is time we went to bed'?"

The sentence is incorrect and is an example of mixt tenses—the verbs is and went being in the present and imperfect respectively. As a rule, the attraction of tenses requires that the tense of the dependent verb shall be present when that of the principal verb is present, and past when that of the principal verb is past. In the sentence cited the principal verb (is) being in the present tense its dependent verb (went) should be also in the same tense, but is not. Substitute "go" for "went," and the sentence is correct.

"H. V. B., San José, Cal.—"(1) Is it correct to use the word should for the word ought? Are they interchangeable? (2) What, if any, is the difference between 'If I was' and 'If I were'?"

(1) There is a distinction between the words should and ought. Ought is the stronger word, holding most closely to the sense of moral obligation, or sometimes of imperative logical necessity; should may have the sense of moral obligation or may apply merely to propriety or expediency, as in the proverb, "The liar should have a good memory"—because he will have need of it. (2) Gould Brown says there is a difference between 'If I were' and 'If I was.' He says that the indicative admits the fact, while the subjunctive supposes that he was not.

"J. E. H., New York.—The correct pronunciation of the first word you cite is var (as in far) i-co-sil (as in machine); the second word is unknown to us.

THE SCIENTIFIC SOURCES OF HEALTH

"The first attempt to view human disease in its entirety from the standpoint of preventive medicine."—H. TIMBRELL BULSTRODE, M.D., Cantab., D. P. H.

The Prevention of Disease

By Authorities of International Reputation

TRANSLATED FROM THE GERMAN
By WILMOT EVANS

Introduction by
H. TIMBRELL BULSTRODE, M.D.,

Medical Department of H. M. Local Government Board, Lecturer on Public Health in the Medical School of Charing Cross Hospital, Honorary Member of the Council of the Epidermological Society of London, etc.

IT FURNISHES the latest and most conclusively demonstrated facts and expert opinions on the prevention of every form of human disease. It is the only work of the kind in the English language.

COMMENDED IN THE HIGHEST TERMS

The Sun, New York (in a three-and-a-half column review): There is no doubt that the Funk & Wagnalls Company has rendered a public service by publishing this work.

The Springfield Republican: It offers a sound and healthy code of life for all who are not physically perfect, which few people are. If the traditional ratio of value between prevention and disease be correct, there should be the worth of at least a hundredweight of doctor's bills in the two ponderous volumes.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer: To the medical profession the work appeals with force as being the only one in the language which covers the whole ground, and to the unprofessional reader it has value for the suggestions it gives for individual conduct so as to keep in perfect health.

St. Paul Pioneer Press: It is a scholarly contribution to that present spirit which is trying to cultivate sound health as a condition precedent to a sound mind.

The Pittsburg Dispatch: The books ought to make a welcome addition to the physician's library.

The Medical Standard, New York: The authorship represents as fine an array of medical talent as is to be found in the world, and the quality of the work does not belie the authorship. The work is a very readable one—valuable for the practitioner, interesting to the layman.

THOMAS L. STEDMAN, M.D., New York, says:

"The idea of the work is excellent, and its present application novel; I know of no other book of the kind in the English language. The authors are men of standing, and they have handled their subjects in an eminently practical manner. I regard the work as one that should meet with favor among physicians in this country. It is well written on a novel subject, scientific in tone, and authoritative."

Two Volumes 8vo; Cloth, 1081 pp. Price, $3.75 net per volume. $7.50 per set.

Funk & Wagnalls Company, Pubs., New York

BOOKS FOR PHYSICIANS

THE PREVENTION OF DISEASE

This work presents the latest opinion and the most conclusively demonstrated fact on the prevention of every important form of human disease. It is written by authorities of international reputation. With introduction by H. TIMBRELL BULSTRODE, M.D. Two vols., 8vo, cloth, 1081 pp. $7.50.

SUPERSTITION IN MEDICINE

A history of the erroneous ideas and fanciful beliefs with regard to sickness and its cure, that have prevailed in the world from the days of ancient Rome to the present time. By Prof. Dr. HUGO MAGNUS, authorized translation from the German, edited by Dr. Julius L. Salingner. 12mo, cloth, 214 pages. $1.00 net.

THE PSYCHIC TREATMENT OF NERVOUS DISORDERS

The experiences and principles of psychic treatment of nervous disorders based upon twenty years of successful specialization and practice in this branch of medical skill. By Dr. PAUL DU BOIS, translated by Smith Ely Jelliffe, M.D., Ph.D., and William A. White, M.D., from the authors' "Les Psychoneuroses." 8vo, cloth, 471 pages. $3.00 net.

CARBONIC ACID GAS IN MEDICINE

A scientific treatise on the healing qualities of carbonic acid gas. By Dr. A. HILLES ROSE. 12mo, cloth, 200 pages. $1.00 net.

PHYSICIAN VS. BACTERIOLOGIST

This volume embraces Rosenbach's discussion on clinical-bacteriologic and hygienic problems based on original investigations, representing the contest against the overgrowth of bacteriology. By Prof. O. ROSENBACH, M.D. 12mo, Cloth, 455 pp. $1.50 net.

ELECTRO-DIAGNOSIS AND ELECTRO-THERAPEUTICS

The contents include a clear and concise explanation of the principles of electricity, and the latest research as to the physiological effects of electricity upon the human body. By Dr. TOBY COHN, Nerve Specialist, Berlin. 8 Plates, 29 Cuts. 8vo, Cloth. $2.00.

NERVES IN ORDER

Or the maintenance of health. The latest scientific knowledge upon the entire realm of physical and mental health. By A. T. SCHOFIELD, M.D., M.R.C.S.E. 12mo, Cloth, 305 pp. $1.50 postpaid.

NERVES IN DISORDER

This book seeks to dispel ignorance regarding all functional nerve diseases and to set forth the most advanced and valuable scientific principles for successfully treating these troubles. By A. T. SCHOFIELD, M.D., M.R.C.S.E. 12mo, Cloth, 218 pp. $1.50.

THE FORCE OF MIND

The action of the mind in the cause and cure of many disorders is considered in this book from new and scientific standpoints, with suggestions for the practical use of this knowledge by physicians and laymen. By A. T. SCHOFIELD, M.D., M.R.C.S.E. 12mo, Cloth, 347 pp. $2.00.

SPRINGS OF CHARACTER

This work gives the latest scientific information on the sources and qualities of character, showing the importance of character and the soundest principles for its development. By A. T. SCHOFIELD, M.D., M.R.C.S.E. 8vo, Cloth, 259 pp. $1.50.

THE UNCONSCIOUS MIND

A study into the mysteries of the mind and their relation to physical and psychical life, containing the latest scientific research on this topic. By A. T. SCHOFIELD, M.D., M.R.C.S.E. 8vo, Cloth, 451 pp. $2.00.

HANDBOOK OF MEDICAL AND ORTHOPEDIC GYMNASTICS

The principles and application of Swedish gymnastics, massage, and orthopedics, with descriptions of many cases of illness, helped or cured by gymnastic treatment. By ANDERS WIDB, M.D. 8vo, Cloth, 322 pp. illus. $3.00 net.

A BRIEF OF NECROSCOPY

A clear, concise manual of medical information giving with sufficient detail all practical facts connected with the study, diagnosis, technique, and medico-legal aspects of a post-mortem examination. By GUSTAV SCHMIDT, M.D. Pocket size. 16mo, Leather, 166 pp. $1.00.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY, Pubs., NEW YORK

Examination Offer Closes Thanksgiving-Day---
Read and Act Promptly--- Today

A Good Dictionary is a Family Necessity.
Now is the Opportunity to Get It

The
New York
Herald says:
"It is admirable from every point of view. It is the most satisfactory and most complete dictionary yet printed."

Why Not?

Why not settle on Thanksgiving-Day as the date for owning this priceless Dictionary, and have it available for all the family?

The children need it; you need it; it's a household necessity. Do not delay longer! Here's the opportunity—No money until you have examined it five days—then $2.00 down and $2.00 a month. SPECIAL TERMS.

"GET THE STANDARD." If you desire a Dictionary that excels in all the essential features, and in addition contains important other—features which have been the have demonstrated their practical

Dictionary that excels in all the essential features of excellence not found in any result of careful thought, and which utility, "GET THE STANDARD."

A. G. Wilkinson, Principal Examiner U. S.
Patent Office: "So vastly superior that I can hardly say enough in its praise. . . . I congratulate the editors on the most perfect dictionary ever made in any language."

The center of Every English-Speaking Home Should be a good, reliable, unabridged Dictionary.

State Commissioner of Education, New York, A. S. Draper, LL.D., May 19, 1905:
"The Standard Dictionary is a great work, well worthy of universal recognition."

IN buying a Dictionary it would surely seem reasonable that you should want only that Dictionary which spells and defines all the real, living terms that go to make up the English language. The new Funk & Wagnalls "Standard" contains nearly 100,000 more terms than any other Dictionary published—therefore
"GET THE STANDARD."

The Sun, New York: "As regards its vocabulary, this dictionary far surpasses all of its rivals."

The St. James's Budget (Weekly edition of St. James's Gazette), London:
"To say that it is perfect in form and scope is not extravagance of praise, and to say that it is the most valuable dictionary of the English Language is but to repeat the obvious."

From Now Until Thanksgiving-Day We Offer
You an Opportunity to Examine it, Compare it with Others, and then Purchase it on Easy Terms.

Why not provide an Intellectual Thanksgiving Feast for all the Family by owning the long-needed Dictionary?

IF you prefer a Dictionary whose superiority has been attested by, and which is in use in, the great educational institutions throughout the world—which has been purchased by special order for many of the crowned heads of Europe, as well as the President of the United States,

"GET THE STANDARD."

Late Hon. John Hay, Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.: "The great value and importance of the work are apparent at the first glance."

Hon. Wm. H. Moody, Attorney General, Washington, D. C.: "I desire to express my appreciation of the thoroughness and excellence of the preparation of the new volume."

A. M. Wheeler, LL.D., Yale University: "Clear, concise, accurate, comprehensive; at once scholarly and popular; admirably arranged, easy to consult;
a delight to the eye and the mind."

The Only Complete Record of the English Language in Existence--- Acknowledged Everywhere to be the Best.

TO sum up: If you wish the best Dictionary, at a reasonable price (about one-third that charged for the only other Dictionary that at all compares with it), with the privilege of satisfying yourself at our expense that it is the best by actual examination and comparison, sign and mail the accompanying coupon and

"GET THE STANDARD."

Until Thanksgiving-
Day we will deliver
FREE of all charges the
Two-Volume 1907 Edition of The Standard Dictionary.
Examine it 5 days; if you decide to keep it, send us $2.00 as a first payment;
if you decide not to keep it, return it at our expense. SIGN COUPON OPPOSITE.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY, NEW YORK

The Independent, New York: "It is a noble example in which the modern tendency to popularize knowledge has risen to the highest level yet reached."

Prof. A. H. Sayce, Oxford University, the Eminent Philologist:

"The Standard Dictionary is truly magnificent, and worthy of the great continent which has produced it. It is more than complete. . . . It is certain to supersede all other existing dictionaries of the English language."

L. D.
11-16-07

FUNK & WAGNALLS
COMPANY,
44-60 East 23d St.,
New York.

Gentlemen:—Will you please send me for examination, carriage free, a copy of your new Standard Dictionary, in two volumes, bound in $\frac{3}{4}$ Morocco leather, price \$30.00? It is expressly understood that I may retain this work for five days, and if then I do not care for it, I will return it to you at your expense, I assuming no risk of any kind, while the volumes are either in my possession or in transit. If retained, I will remit to you \$2.00 as the initial payment, within six days of receipt of the Dictionary by me, and \$2.00 monthly until the \$30.00, the regular price of the Dictionary, is paid.

Signed.....

Date..... Address..... D-11-16-7

Our readers are asked to mention THE LITERARY DIGEST when writing to advertisers.

The Literary Digest Classified Columns

The Cost for Advertisements under this heading is 65 cents per line of six words.

Minimum, 4 lines

HELP AND SITUATIONS WANTED

WANTED—Clerks and others with common school educations only, who wish to qualify for ready positions at $25 a week and over, to write for free copy of my new prospectus and endorsements from leading concerns everywhere. One graduate fills $8,000 place, another $5,000 and any number earn $1,500. The best clothing ad writer in New York owes his success within a few months to my teachings. Demand exceeds supply. George H. Powell, Advertising and Business Expert, 673 Metropolitan Annex, New York.

TEACHERS, governesses, housekeepers, mothers-helps, matrons, companions, secretaries, attendants supplied. The HOPKINS EDUCATIONAL AGENCY, 1 Union Square, N. Y.

Brain Brokers. Telling how 25,000 men were placed. Office, Sales and Technical men wanted. Salaries $600 to $6,000. Write today, stating age, experience and location desired. Hapgood, 305-307 Broadway, N. Y.

WANTED representatives in unoccupied territory for sale agents for wonderful Kern Incandescent Gas Burner. Most efficient and economical in the world. Write HOWSE COMPANY, 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

PATENTS AND ATTORNEYS

PATENTS SECURED or fee returned. Send sketch for free report as to patentability. GUIDE BOOK and WHAT TO INVENT, with valuable List of Inventions Wanted, sent free. ONE MILLION DOLLARS offered for one invention; $15,000 for others. Patents secured by us advertised free in World's Progress; sample free. Evans Wilkens & Co., 549 "F," Washington.

Patents that PROTECT—Our three books for inventors mailed on receipt of six cents stamps. R. S. & A. B. Lacey, Rooms 12 to 23 Pacific Bldg., Washington, D. C. Established 1889.

LET me sell your Patent. My book explaining how mailed free. Sixteen years' experience. Patent sales exclusively. Wm. E. Hoyt, Patent Sales Specialist, 290 J. J. Broadway, New York City.

BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS

MAGAZINES AT WHOLESALE RATES AND FREE SAMPLES. Advise us what periodicals you are taking and when subscriptions expire. We will then send you several samples of the leading magazines, also our wholesale list giving lowest prices obtainable anywhere. Morris Book Shop, 152 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

THE RACE QUESTION discussed in a sane manner from standpoint of Americanism in "The Voice of the Third Generation." Every patriotic American citizen should read this stirring work. Send 25 cents for copy to-day. HENRY P. FRY, 422 Temple Court, Chattanooga, Tenn.

RAILROAD BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS, including Reports, Mortgages, Leases, etc., for sale. DIXIE BOOK SHOP, 41 Liberty Street, New York.

HOLIDAY GIFTS

AT A SACRIFICE Have just obtained a shipment of fancy, imported, damask towels, size 21 x 42 inches. Each one is a beautiful, richly designed masterpiece, hemstitched and decorated with an elaborate drawn-work pattern.

FOR A HOLIDAY GIFT nothing would be more appreciated and it will pay you to act now, while this lot lasts. Regular price, $14.00 doz., our price, $15.00 pr. $4.00 half doz. $7.50 doz., postage prepaid. MONEY BACK IF NOT SATISFIED. S. F. MILLER, Box 110, Literary Digest.

HOME UTILITIES

Our New Electric-Kerosene-Burner will give three times the light of the ordinary burner, and is ABSOLUTELY ODORLESS. Sample 75c. Agents Wanted. CHARLES-BRYANT CO., 92 Foster, Seattle, Wash.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. California raisins at any time direct from the farm. Send a one-dollar bill to CHAS. D. JAMES, Oleander, Cal., for a trial box.

THE NAID FILTER, new in principle, unequalled efficiency, germ-proof, moderate cost. Write for interesting Booklet on Pure Water and our free trial offer. THE NAID FILTER CO., 625 Sudbury Bldg., Boston.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVE WANTED. A large income assured to anyone who will act as our representative after learning our business thoroughly by mail. Experience unnecessary. All we require is honesty, ambition and willingness to learn a lucrative business. No soliciting or traveling. An exceptional opportunity for those who desire to better their condition and make more money. For full particulars write nearest office for free book No. 72. National Co-operative Realty Co., Athenaeum Bldg., Chicago, Ill.; Marden Bldg., Washington, D. C.; Phelps Bldg., Scranton, Pa., and Delgar Bldg., Oakland, Calif.

THE BEST INVESTMENT. If you wish a home now, or to provide one for old age, you can find no better investment than the purchase of a tract of rich Southern land at present prices in a territory just opened up by railroads. Tidewater Virginia and Eastern Carolina have the most fertile soil of any of the Southern States and a climate that is well nigh ideal. Let us send you descriptive pamphlet. F. L. MERRITT, Land and Industrial Agent, Norfolk & Southern Railway, Norfolk, Va.

MEN OF BUSINESS interested in new field for making money will find in our proposition what they are seeking; have new plan in mail order line that will please those seeking good investment, large profits; fortune for right person.

THE F. H. ALDEN CO., 140 East 4th St., Cincinnati, O.

HOW TO FINANCE A BUSINESS ENTERPRISE. Clearly taught by the Brokers and Promoters' Handbook. An interesting 48-page descriptive booklet, No. 88, mailed free. THE BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT CO. OF AMERICA, 117 Nassau St., N. Y.

HOW to organize a Corporation and promote the enterprise. Write for booklet "Points to Business Men." EDMUND WILCOX, 1 Madison Ave., New York City. We offer no speculative scheme but if you have $100 or more to invest at 8% on security 3 to 1, address Farmers Hardware Co., Pelham, Ga.

BONDS AND MORTGAGES

INVESTMENT One $15,000.00, note five years, interest 8%, payable quarterly, secured by second mortgage on exceptionally fine business property in center of Jacksonville, Florida. Maker and endorser first class. References to best city banks. Offered for $13,500 cash. Address Box 3, Saint Leo, Florida.

FARM MORTGAGES FOR SALE See for Booklet "We're Right on the Ground" Descriptive memorandum of Loans, &c. E. J. LANDER & CO. Security Bank Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn. Box 87 Grand Forks, N. D.

Our Minneapolis First Mortgage Loans are safe, always worth par and bring good interest. Inquire G. L. FORT, 311 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

LITERARY ASSISTANCE

WRITING-TO-ORDER—Lectures, orations, addresses, essays, papers, arguments prepared. REVISION, criticism, typewriting of manuscripts. DISPOSAL on commission. Correspondence invited. Booklet Authors' Revision Bureau, 2400 7th Ave., N. Y.

MSB: revised by successful author; advice as to publication, essays, speeches, etc., of highest quality; literary aid of all sorts, Literary Bureau, 303 Adelphi St., B'klyn.

FOR PERSONAL USE

MOCCA SHOES, EQUAL RIGHTS TO EVERY TOE. Ventilated. Endorsed by orthopedic specialists. Sold at best shops. Write for illustrated list and prices. Mocca Shoe Co., Back Bay, Boston.

FOOT COMFORT. Georges' Shields the best yet. Corn Shield 10c. Bunions 25c. Describe location. Free Booklet J. J. Georges & Son, 1216 Penn. Ave., Washington D. C.

WATCHES, JEWELRY, ETC.

GENUINE TURQUOISE MATRIX suitable for scarf pin, brooch or ring, 75 cents. SCARAB, $1.50. Catalogs free. R. N. DICKEY, Precious Stones, Jacksonville, Fla.

PICTURES

PERRY PICTURES. Every home should have them. Send 25c. for 25 art subjects, or 25 Madonnas, or 25 for children, or 25 religious, or $1.00 for 4 sets, each 54 x 8, Catalog and 2 pictures 4c. Awarded Four Gold Medals. THE PERRY PICTURES CO. Dept. 2, Malden, Mass.

EDUCATIONAL

COLGATE UNIVERSITY HAMILTON, N. Y. Founded 1869. George Edmunds Merrill, D.D., LL.D., Pres. Magnificent equipment. Large endowment. Moderate expenses. Distinguished for her high scholastic standards and the moral tone essential to the best culture. Address Registrar Vincent B. Fisk.

SEEDS, STOCK AND PETS

BIRD MANNA is the secret preparation used by the Canary Breeders of the Hartz Mountains in Germany for curing all diseases of Cage Birds and restoring lost song. It acts like magic. See by druggist or by mail. Send for Free Bird Book. PHILA. BIRD FOOD CO., 400 N. 3rd St., Phila., Pa.

MACHINERY

RIFE HYDRAULIC RAM, pumps water by water power—no attention—no expense—2 feet fall, elevates water 50 feet, etc. Guaranteed. Catalog free. Rife Ram Co., 2197 Trinity Building, New York City.

MISCELLANEOUS

Vacuum Cap OUR VACUUM CAP when used a few minutes each day draws the blood to the scalp, causing free and normal circulation, which stimulates the hair to a new healthy growth. Sent on trial under guarantee. Write for free particulars. The Modern Vacuum Cap Co., 584 Barclay Block, Denver.

The Literary Digest Realty Exchange

FOR SALE—Irrigated farms of 80 acres and upwards from ten to twenty miles from Denver, the most beautiful city in America. Grains, grasses, fruits, vegetables, beets, etc., grow under our ample supply of water for late as well as early irrigation as they do in few places in the world. You can buy on easy terms, making a small payment down, and we will build houses where needed. Why not leave the old states where land and rentals are so high and buy irrigated land where you govern your water supply by the needs of your crops? Send for beautiful illustrated pamphlet. DENVER RESERVOIR IRRIGATION COMPANY, 726 Ernest & Cramer Bldg., Denver, Colo.

PANORAMIC VIEW OF LOS ANGELES. City map, information valuable to Tourists and Home-seekers, free. C. L. LIPPINCOTT & CO., Dept. L, Un. Tr. Bldg. Los Angeles.

REAL ESTATE OWNERS

Let us tell you how you can make this department sell Southern Property for you.

THE LITERARY DIGEST

HOME GYMNASTICS ON LING'S SYSTEM

By PROF. ANDERS WIDE, M.D.

This system of gymnastics has been designed on strictly scientific principles, and has been recognized by educators throughout the world as a most valuable and practical one. Stockholm has long maintained a Royal Gymnastic Institute where it has been taught with ever-increasing efficiency since 1813. The system has met with great popularity and adaptability as a home-culture course, and the object of this work is to enable any one to put into practice the principles on which sound physical health may be gained and maintained. So grateful have been the Swedish people for the incalculable good accruing to their race through the dissemination and practice of the principles of Pehr Henrik Ling (born in 1776), that they are about to erect a statue to his memory at Stockholm, and all profits from the first edition of this work will be devoted to that purpose, the publishers having waived all right to the same.

12mo, Cloth. 50 cents, net. By mail, 54 cents

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY

44-60 East 23rd Street, NEW YORK CITY

UNDER PONTIUS PILATE

A powerful religious historical novel written in a most vivid and intensely interesting manner. By William Schuyler. Cloth, illustrated, $1.50. Funk & Wagnalls Company, 44-60 East 23rd Street, New York

BETWEEN THE OLD AND THE NEW TESTAMENTS

400 YEARS BET. MALACH. AND MATT.

OR INTERBIBLICAL HISTORY

By David Gregg, D.D., LL.D., President of the Western Theological Seminary

THE history of the Jews as it relates to Palestine and Christ may be roughly divided into two periods: 1.—From Joshua to the Babylonian exile. 2.—From the return of the Jews under Cyrus' reign to the destruction of Jerusalem under the Romans. The latter period is the special concern of this book.

Rev. Wilbur Fletcher Steele, Prof. Biblical Science, University of Denver, says: "This book has delighted me. Faith mounts high as its pages are devoured. It is untechnical and easily comprehended by the layman."

Gen. B. Stewart, D.D., Pres. Auburn Theol. Seminary: "A most interesting book. Dr. Gregg's presentation is illuminating and inspiring. It is a valuable book."

12mo, 125 pages. Cloth, 75 cents net.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY 44-60 E. 23rd St. New York

LIBRARY OF RELIGIOUS POETRY

A collection of the best poetry of all ages and lands, including 1,888 poems, representing the verse of 716 authors. Edited by PHILIP SCHAFF, D.D., LL.D. Royal 8vo, cloth, 1,049 pages, indexes to authors, subjects, first lines, $6.00.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY, Pubs., NEW YORK

HOME-LIFE IN ORDER

By A. T. Schofield, M.D. Good health, good sanitation. Sensible treatment of the body in the matter of bathing, food, good air, sleep and healthful surroundings. 12mo, Cloth, $1.50.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY, New York

Our readers are asked to mention THE LITERARY DIGEST when writing to advertisers.

WHETHER YOU buy books by the set, or one at a time, keep in mind that the sequel to a perfect library is the Globe-Wernicke "Elastic" Book-case.

Every book-lover fully appreciates this statement where he attempts to classify an assortment of books, as no other sectional book-case admits of such varied and artistic combinations as the Globe-Wernicke patterns.

No matter how diversified the character and size of the volumes may be, we furnish graded sections that are not only commensurate with the size of the books, but also with the available space in the room.

And you can obtain these sections in eight different finishes of oak and mahogany—dull and polish; fitted with plain, leaded and bevel plate glass receding doors that travel freely and easily.

Made in three distinct types that are fully described in our catalogue which also contains a color plate illustrating the different finishes.

Prices uniform everywhere. Carried in stock by nearly 1,500 authorized agents. Where not represented we ship on approval, freight paid. Write for catalogue M-107.

The Globe-Wernicke Co. CINCINNATI.

Branch Stores: New York, 380-382 Broadway Cor. White. Chicago, 224-228 Wabash Avenue. Boston, 91-93 Federal Street.

Just the best typewriter that money can buy!

The Remington

Remington Typewriter Company (Incorporated)

New York and Everywhere

"Everyone Exclaims About Our Lights!"

"THE LAMPS are splendid. Everyone exclaims about the amount of light they give," writes Mrs. W. T. Reese, Tiffin, Ohio. "My City friends visiting here say they are as good as Gas. In fact, my home is now considered the best lighted house in the county. Why, when we go visiting our neighbors of an evening it is hard to keep from exclaiming about the poor light they have!"

The Angle Lamp is the new method of burning common kerosene oil, and is as different from the ordinary lamps in results as it is in appearance. It makes common kerosene the best, the cheapest and the most satisfactory of all lighting methods. Safer and more reliable than gasoline or acetylene, yet as convenient to operate as gas or electricity.

THE ANGLE LAMP

is lighted and extinguished like gas. May be turned high or low without odor. No smoke, no danger. Filled while lighted and without moving. Requires filling but once or twice a week. It floods a room with its beautiful, soft mellow light that has no equal.

And yet, the lamp actually pays for itself. For while the ordinary round wick lamp, usually considered the cheapest of all lighting methods, burns but about 5 hours on a quart of oil, the Angle Lamp burns a full 16 hours on the same quantity. But send for our catalog "47" explaining the new principles employed in this lamp, and for our proposition for selling on

30 DAYS' TRIAL

Wouldn't you like to have your home admirably referred to by your neighbors as "the best lighted house in the county"—if you knew such a light would cost so much less than your present system as to pay for itself in a few months' use? Then write for catalog "47" describing The Angle Lamp fully and listing 32 varieties from $2.00 up. It is free for the asking.

ANGLE MFG. CO., 159-161 West 24th Street, NEW YORK